FBI probes Farr document-shredding charges

Congressman contends it was 'standard operating procedure'

By JOHN DETRO

THE FEDERAL Bureau of Investigation planned a "preliminary inquiry" into allegations of extensive document shredding related to Sam Farr's switch from State Assembly to the U.S. Congress, The Pine Cone was told on Wednesday by an FBI agent.

"We are seeking information on the alleged shredding," FBI man Steve Cook said during a telephone conversation from his office in Oakland. "The shredding has not been verified. The allegations came from a single source."

Cook was contacted by The Pine Cone on the basis of information obtained locally. He ultimately referred all questions to Rick Smith, FBI media representative in the San Francisco office.

Aware of The Pine Cone deadline, Smith promised to phone in a fuller and more formal statement on Wednesday afternoon. It was:

"We have received allegations as yet unsubstantiated regarding Congressman Sam Farr's office. They are vague and to date the FBI has not opened an investigation. The FBI is endeavoring to determine if the allegations warrant an investigation."

The purported shredding involved constituent case files which Farr's staff had gathered while he was in the California Assembly. Questions were raised Wednesday by two parties, both of whom agreed to extensive interviews with The Pine Cone on the condition that they not be identified by name:

SAM FARR

- A Carmel man who had submitted a complex financial case to Farr's Assembly staff for possible forwarding to the State Attorney General's Office. He agreed to be identified as "an education activist."
- A peninsula woman who said her involvement in the alleged matter drew "strange telephone calls" to her home. She agreed to be identified this way: "Former State of California 27th Assembly District employee maintaining Monterey and Santa Cruz district offices under jurisdiction of the Assembly Rules Committee as acting member during special Assembly elections."

The Rules Committee on Monday morning shut down the district offices in Monterey and Santa Cruz. Press reports quoted Donna Blitzer, Farr's chief of staff both in Sacramento and now the nation's capital, as saying the workload could not justify the expense of keeping the offices open.

"I think the offices were closed because Assembly Rules thought I was a loose cannon," the ex-employee said. "When I talked about the shredding, Assembly Rules went ballistic. They demanded to know what was shredded."

Farr's response

Congressman Farr was holding constituent meetings at his district office in Monterey on Wednesday. Contacted by The Pine Cone, he said: "Anything that was done amounted to standard operating procedure with confidential files. When offices are closed, the files are

TAMC to seek funding for Hatton freeway alternative

■ In an unusual compromise, TAMC members support widening Highway 1, but they will support freeway if all the earmarked funds are not forthcoming.

By PAUL WOLF

IN A key vote Wednesday, officials representing Monterey County and the cities agreed to continue pursuing an alternative to the Hatton Canyon freeway.

The panel voted 16-0 to seek state funds for the widening of Highway 1 from the Carpenter Street intersection to Rio Road.

However, the Transportation Agency for Monterey County (TAMC) added a crucial provision to its funding request to the state commission that has its hands on the purse strings.

TAMC members want the full sum of $41 million, originally earmarked for the Hatton Canyon Freeway, to stay in the county.

Because the widening project could cost as little as $6 million to $9 million, members hope the California Transportation Commission (CTC) will allow the county to keep the remainder of the money for other additional regional transportation improvement projects.

If the CTC balks at the request, TAMC will pursue the freeway as a fall-back position.

TAMC representatives will make a presentation before the CTC on Wednesday, Sept. 8.

The convoluted action Aug. 25, was the result of a patchwork compromise reflecting TAMC's irreconcilable split on the Hatton Canyon-versus-alternatives debate.

Venerable Golden Bough up for sale

By SCOTT BREARTON

CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA MAY be losing its hometown movie theater.

United Artists Theater Group, which has owned the property for more than 20 years, is selling Carmel's Golden Bough Cinema for $1.3 million, a San Jose real estate broker announced last week.

"It would be an enormous loss to the community," said Enid Sales, chairperson of Carmel's Historical Preservation Committee. "This is probably one of our most important sites in Carmel, both historically and culturally. It represents a very strong thread in our community."

According to John Polonchak, the listing broker, the 16,000 square-foot property was put on the market three weeks ago. Included in the sale is the building itself, which encompasses approximately 10,000 square feet.

"We have several interested parties, but it's not under contract yet," Polonchak said.

Currently, the property, located at Monte Verde and 8th, is zoned for two possible uses – a movie theater or live stage theater, according to Brian Roseth, Carmel's acting planning director. He said in the event the building is demolished, the use would revert back to residential.

But a deed restriction put on the property sale by United Artists makes it unlikely the site will remain a movie theater.

"The seller does not want to sell it for another movie theater use," said Polonchak.

The chefs of Big Sur

Carl Shadwell: Offers 'Rocket Scientist' fare

Editor's Note: This is the second in an occasional series on Big Sur dining establishments and their chefs.

By SUSAN BECK

IN KEEPING with tradition, the executive chef at Big Sur's River Inn offers a variety of homestyle meals to accommodate everyone.

For the past three years, Carl Shadwell has created a menu of dishes he refers to as "Rocket Scientist — It explodes in your mouth."

Shadwell is interested in providing good food at fair prices. He doesn't have a classical training background in the culinary arts and is not a proponent of creating meals that "look like they were painted on the plate."

The tradition of basic home cooked meals started when Ellen Brown Roberts, the daughter of the second owners of the River Inn site, Barbara and Michael Pfeiffer, opened part of her home to the public and added nine motel units.

Roberts became renowned for her hospitality and delectable old-fashioned meals, especially her homemade apple pies. She named her place Apple Pie Inn.

Apple pie, of course, is still on the menu along with other favorites. The most popular items are ribs, burgers and his new lasagna, said Shadwell.

But it wasn't making great ribs and burgers that Shadwell was interested in as a young man — he wanted to be a marine biologist.

His parents moved from Austria to the Monterey Peninsula and opened a restaurant in Moss Landing. Eventually, they bought the Glen Oaks Restaurant and Motel in Big Sur.

SIX BELLS' ROBERT WEBBER

Robert Webber: Area 'needed local hangout'

By SUSAN BECK

NOT ONLY is Robert Webber the cook at Six Bells Pub in Big Sur, he also owns it lock, stock and barrel.

He came to the United States four years ago from Chelsea, London, England, with the specific idea in mind to establish an upbeat local gathering place in Big Sur.

He got the idea after a previous visit. "I knew this place needed a local hangout," said Webber. "Most of the places had become tourist-oriented."

By trade, Webber is a gas engineer. However, he spent most of his years in London working as a chauffeur.

"I liked the idea of it," he said. "The money was good and I met some very interesting people. It was a clean job. I wore a suit all day and the only strenuous work was washing the car."

But the longer he worked as a chauffeur, the more he realized there was no future in it for him. After two years, he decided, "to make the plunge." He took classes in restaurant-pub management, learned the basics in pricing items, sold his home and moved to California.

Detailed plan

With every detail planned for, Webber spent four months getting his Six Bells Pub ready to open in March of 1990.

At first, he hired cooks, but they were inconsistent. He decided that if he was going to train them properly he would have to learn how to do it himself. "I knew I could cook in a domestic sense," said Webber.

For 27th Assembly District special primary election

County elections officials hope for solid voter turnout

By SCOTT BREARTON

OFFICIALS AT the Monterey County Elections Department are hoping voter enthusiasm for the 27th State Assembly District race will pick up as the Aug. 31 special primary nears.

According to Tony Anchundo, assistant registrar of voters, turnout at the polls may be lower for this election than it was for the supervisorial runoff held earlier this month.

"I don't believe we're getting the same energy and excitement that we got last time in the supervisorial runoff," Anchundo said. "I'm not seeing the same number of absentee ballots returned."

As of Aug. 23, the elections department issued 18,848 absentee ballots but have only received 4,189 to date – about 22 percent, according to Anchundo.

Still time

"Of course, we still have time," Anchundo noted. "But those numbers are alarming, as far as the volume of ballots being returned."

Anchundo said the lower returns can be attributed to "voter burnout" with this, the fifth election in Monterey County this year.

Consider:

• A special congressional primary election held in April.

• A Cachagua Fire Protection District election in May.

• A congressional runoff election in June, coupled with the supervisorial primary.

• A supervisorial runoff election held earlier this month.

"Either voters are not excited, or the campaigns are just not aggressively reaching these people," Anchundo said of the Assembly race.

"I would be surprised if it (voter turnout) would be more that 25 percent," Anchundo predicted. "I would guess it would be between 20 and 25 percent.

"The majority of the voters are in Santa Cruz County, so I would have to say there will be a better turnout there."

Bur Anchundo urged voters to prove him wrong at the polls: "Look at what happened in the Davi-Karas (5th District

Goals of seniors-help advocates remain unclear

■ Committed: Will to help is evident, but characterizing the need and outlining solutions is a difficult task.

By PAUL WOLF

WHILE A number of people in town remain committed to the idea of establishing a seniors-help network in Carmel, those involved in the planning remain in the dark about how it would be structured or what services it would provide.

Mayor Ken White, who proposed the idea, met Wednesday, Aug. 18, with two Carmel residents and representatives from Carmel churches.

"We are sure about what our concerns are, but we are not certain about the solution," said Marjorie Montelius, a retired social worker who joined White and resident Becky Hanna in the first brainstorming session.

"We want to find out if there are any residents in Carmel who are just not taking advantage of the services that are offered," said White. "A lot of our elderly in Carmel are independent and they don't want assistance."

The key concern appears not to be whether the area's social-service programs are adequate, but whether people know what services are available and are not somehow left out of the loop.

That is why White has described his goal as establishing a "clearinghouse for information." Who would coordinate such information is still up in the air.

"We want to evolve toward a solution," White explained.

The mayor said churches tend to look out for members of there own congregations, leaving non-affiliated members of the community vulnerable.

White and Montelius said there should be some kind of coordination between the churches, social service agencies, home health care agencies and the city.

Organizations such as the Carmel Foundation, Meals on Wheels and even the Carmel Police Department provide referrals.

"True, there is not a single place to get all your questions answered," said Carmel Police Capt. Don Fuselier. "But there is a lot of cross-referencing, so I'm not sure where the gaps are. If there is an at-risk senior, we try to handle it, or else there are other agencies that handle it."

Montelius raised the possibility of a "24-hour answering service," manned by volunteers. Most significantly, however, Montelius asserts that the true deficiency lies not so much in emergencies but in their follow-up — that is, "case-management." If so, the prospective program has ventured beyond information and into bona fide social services. Who will provide them?

But Hanna said there exists a gap somewhere between emergencies and long-term care.

Indeed, a group like Meals on Wheels, which feeds 30 to 40 housebound seniors in Carmel every day, provides a certain level of monitoring for the organization's clients. But its role is more specific than what White and the others are discussing.

While White has considered the possibility of the city coordinating an informational network, City Administrator Jere Kersar — who was not part of the brainstorming session Aug. 18 — said he assumed "this would be completely a citizens' effort." If the program were to affect city services, it would be "another kind of proposition altogether," he explained.

White said the next meeting will be with social service representatives some time in late September.

'Haven't budgeted for it'

City won't contribute to Vista Lobos renovation

By PAUL WOLF

CARMEL OFFICIALS support plans to renovate the Vista Lobos building, but citizens should brace themselves for no financial help from the city.

"Let's say we haven't budgeted for it," said City Administrator Jere Kersnar, who explained that citizens' groups may be on their own.

Meanwhile, there is at least one promising commitment: Carmel architect John Thodos has promised to supply the designs for free. "I would be more than happy to do the work that is required," he said, noting that he already has some basic ideas on how to approach the building. "I don't think this presents an overly complicated situation."

The Vista Lobos community room houses the Carmel Recreation Department and sits adjacent to the municipal parking lot at the north end of town. Formerly the Handley Lumber building, the property has retained its "rustic" flavor — but a little too much so for some people's tastes.

The floors are plywood, and the walls not insulated. As Carmel Recreation Coordinator Mike Gorczyca put it, "It's hot in the summer and freezing in the winter."

"There are so few places in Carmel to meet," said Noel Van Bibber, president of the Northeast Neighbors Association. "I like the ambiance, but I think we need to take care of some basic things. I think we need a heating system."

But from conceptual drawing to construction, the Northeast Neighbors, the Carmel Residents Association and anyone else who joins the effort may be on their own.

"I think this has to be a citizen-driven, volunteer thing," Thodos said.

Both the CRA and the Northeast Neighbors hold their meetings at Vista Lobos. Because parking is ample and the location is well-lighted, the building makes an idea community hall.

'We don't have the money'

Mayor Ken White agreed. "I think we can do this with volunteer labor. I think the residents' groups can pull this off. We don't have any money to put into this."

The Carmel Recreation Commission is expected to examine what new programming could accompany a spruced up building.

Thodos said he will need the input of a variety of people to know how exactly to approach the design.

The prospect of improving Vista Lobos emerged as a topic recently during the 1993-94 budget process, as some in town believed the renovated facility had the potential to bring in money to the city via rentals.

writer and longtime patron of the Golden Bough, is upset at the prospect of losing the hometown movie theater.

"In effect, they're saying even though you've patronized the movie theater for years, we've decided that we don't want you to have a movie theater anymore," McDowell said. "I think the UA is being a bully here.

"I just love old-fashioned movie theaters," McDowell added. "This town is becoming more and more of a theme park. It changes the complexion of the town. That seems to be happening constantly."

While McDowell said he's not against the idea of offering live theater at the site, he thinks it may be financially difficult for a local theater company to succeed there, due to high production costs.

"I think they should definitely keep the option of being able to show movies," he said. "That (deed) restriction is so unfair for the town."

McDowell also cited the Golden Bough's accessibility for older residents who may not be able to get out to other peninsula movie theaters.

McDowell said he hopes Clint Eastwood would consider buying the theater: "This is a natural for Clint. He would have the muscle to keep it as a movie theater. Come on Clint, make my day."

Meanwhile, Stephen Moorer, GroveMont Theater's founder and executive director, has been quietly working to secure the property for the local theater group.

"First and foremost, that building should be saved and not torn down and turned into a residential development," Moorer said, noting the Golden Bough's significance to the community as a cultural center.

"This town was originally founded by artists, playwrights and performers," said Moorer. "The Golden Bough is a monument to all of that.

"GroveMont is looking for a home. Here is a theater crying to be a home to a new group, to turn it back into the playhouse it was for so many years."

Moorer sad the building was internationally famous during the 1930s and 1940s, when "America's favorite playhouse" featured world premiere stagings.

Indeed, the Golden Bough has a long history as a cultural center. According to Sales, the theater was originally born as an arts and crafts clubhouse in 1905. In 1907, the clubhouse committee purchased two lots on Monte Verde. In 1922, the committee built a theater there, be-

Farr stays out of Assembly fray

By SCOTT BREARTON

WHILE SAM FARR will not endorse any one candidate for the 27th Assembly District seat he vacated in June, he did note several key attributes voters might look for.

"I've stayed out of the primary, just as Leon (Panetta) stayed out of the primary for the congressional race." Farr said, noting that three of the four Democratic Assembly candidates worked on his congressional campaign.

Farr, 51, served as the 27th District Assemblyman for nearly 13 years before he was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives on June 8. He replaced Panetta, who resigned his secure 17th Congressional District seat last January to become President Clinton's director of the Office of Management and Budget.

As for qualities Farr would look for in a successor, he said he would choose someone who has served in local public office with hands-on experience as a lawmaker.

"We need someone who is going to be focused on the issues crucial to this district: the economy, the environment and support for education," Farr said.

Characterizing the Central Coast as a "region at risk," Farr said the next assemblyman will have the responsibility of ensuring a smooth transition to a civilian-based economy when Fort Ord moves out.

Additionally, Farr said he would favor candidates who advocate the establishment of a California State University at the Fort Ord site and protection of the region's primary industries – agriculture and tourism.

"And most importantly, we have to be a good advocate for human service programs that the state funds," he said, citing programs for categorical education, mental health, social services, Alzheimers and elderly outreach.

But Farr indicated voter apathy may be a problem for the 27th Assembly District primary election Aug. 31.

"I think the difficulty with this election is the low voter turnout," Farr added. "We've had so many elections in Monterey County – five in a non-election year. It has to be confusing."

Candidates' expenditures

BASED ON campaign disclosure statements issued last week, the following is a list of the nine candidates for the 27th Assembly District seat and their respective expenditures from July 18 through Aug. 14.

- Carl Cieslikowski — $1,030.75
- Susanne Espinoza — $0
- Dave Hope — $0

- Jerome McCready — $0
- Bruce McPherson — $55,878.09

Supes OK wine tasting enterprise for CV Village

By SUSAN BECK

WITH NO one in the audience to contest a future office and wine tasting enterprise in Carmel Valley, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors unanimously approved the Baylaurel Corp. proposal to take over the former Bank of America building in the village.

On Tuesday, Aug. 24, the supervisors agreed to a combined development permit for the Bernardus Winery to convert the bank building into offices with a display for selling wine and sundries in addition to wine tasting.

The permit also includes a general development plan and design approval for exterior changes such as the addition of wood trellises with stone supports, planting areas, three flag poles and lighting.

Lee Rieman, a member of the Upper Carmel Valley Advisory Committee, said the committee approved Baylaurel Corp. proposal with several conditions. Most important, he said, the committee wants the lighting over the existing automated teller machine (ATM) changed to be unobtrusive and harmonious with the area.

REAL ESTATE Viewpoint

by John Saar, Broker

How Much Can You Afford?

Before you start to look for a home, it's important to be able to know how much you can afford to spend. First consider the amount you can pay for housing each month. Then you can weigh the pros and cons of the many mortgage options available, such as fixed rate and adjustable rate loans.

As a general rule, monthly housing costs should be no more than 28% of your monthly pre-tax income. This includes the mortgage payment, real estate taxes, and insurance. If you do have long term debts (student loans, car payments, or anything else that will take more than six months to repay), debt service plus housing costs should be less than 36% of your pre-tax monthly income.

Your monthly payments can buy varying amounts of house, depending upon which mortgage option you select. Usually an adjustable rate mortgage plan will enable you to qualify for a higher loan amount. The Realtor helping you find a new home can make some of the basic calculations or refer you to a lender who will be able to pre-qualify you for a mortgage.

VWS scientists complete initial phase of eagle project

By RICHARD PITNICK

SCIENTISTS WITH the Ventana Wilderness Sanctuary recently completed the initial phase of their Bald Eagle Translocation Program with the recent "release" of the 12 eaglets.

"We had a bigger age disparity among the birds this year than in years past," stated VWS Executive Director Craig Hohenberger, "which is why we had two release dates."

Of the seven larger birds released on Aug. 3, two have left the hacksite permanently. Of the remaining five birds released on Aug. 8, all remained at the hacksite, venturing out for brief, exploratory flights.

"'Release' is not quite an accurate description of what we do," commented VWS Research Coordinator Jeff Davis. "Most of the birds should remain at the site, taking only short flights and returning to feed."

While the birds are capable of feeding themselves, volunteers and staff members will continue to feed the birds.

All the birds are expected to leave the site for good by the age of four months, according to hacksite coordinator Kelly Sorenson.

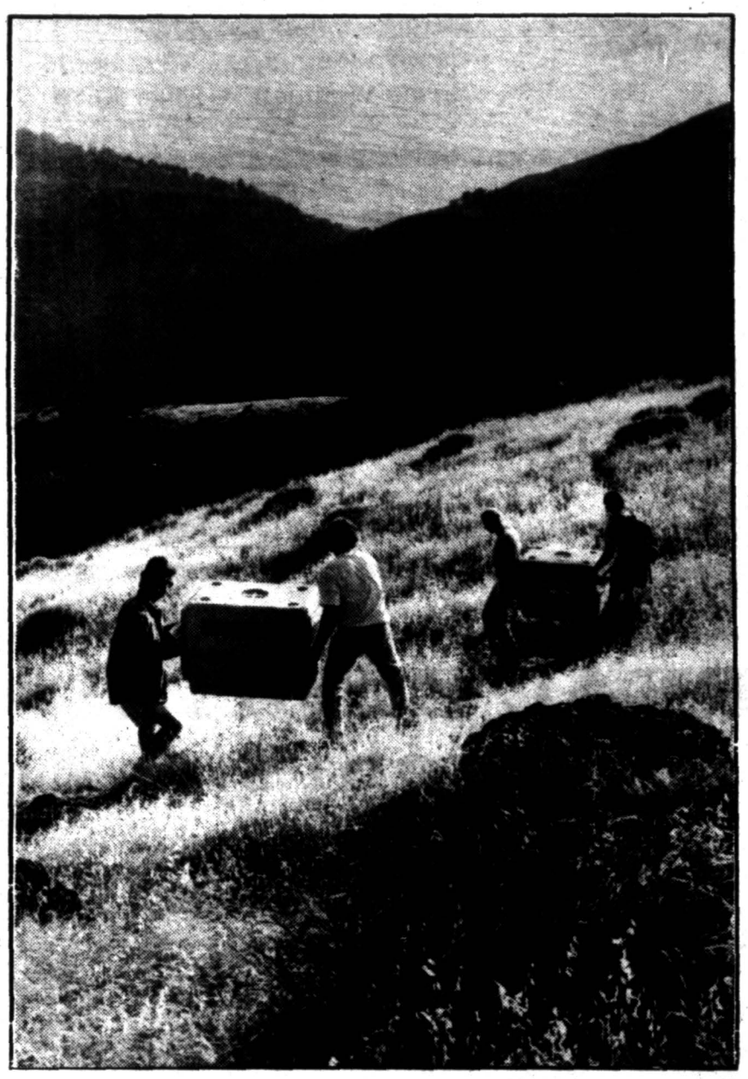
Transmitters attached

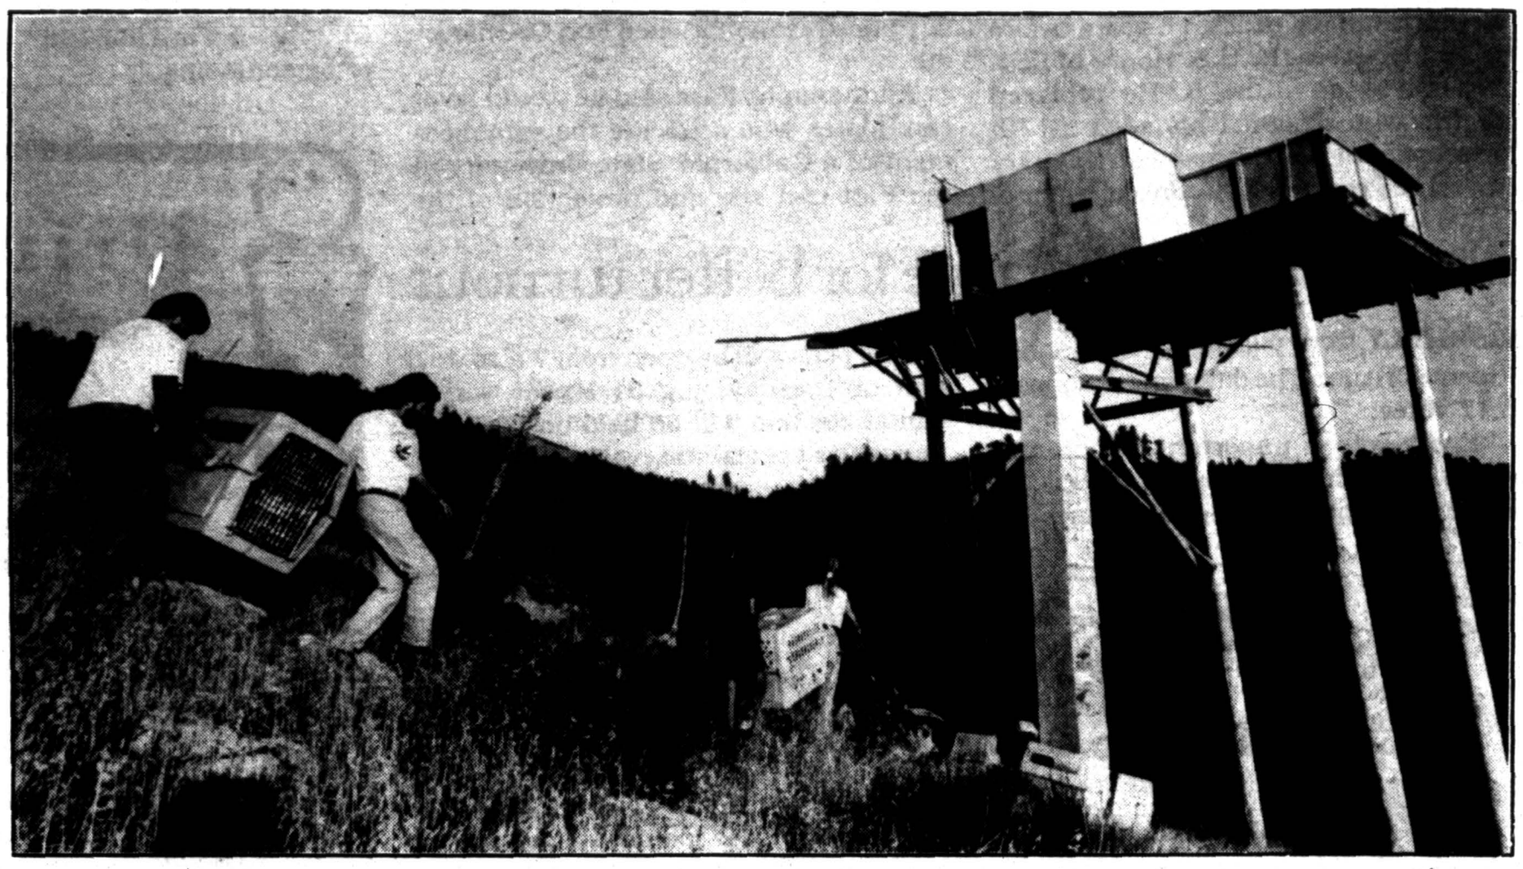
Researchers identified seven male and five female birds, which were flown down from Alaska and transported by van from San Jose to Big Sur on July 24.

Scientists attached tiny transmitters to the birds allowing researchers to track the birds' movements for up to five years.

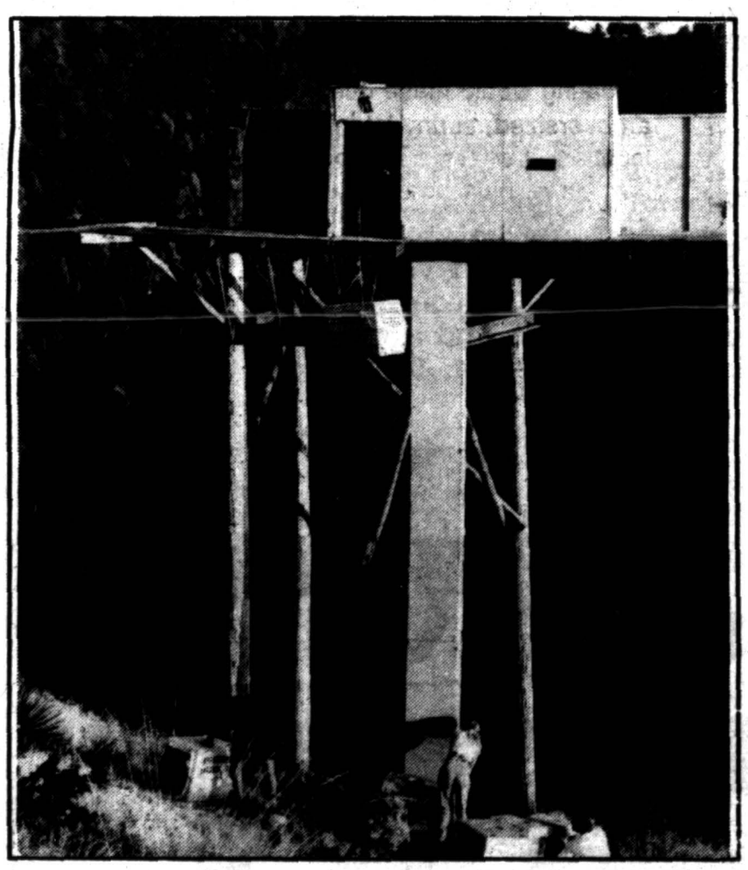
The first satellite transmission of the birds' flight movements is due in one week.

Scientists at VWS hope the newly released birds will establish additional breeding pairs here on the central coast. There are currently two established breeding pairs from previous VWS releases.





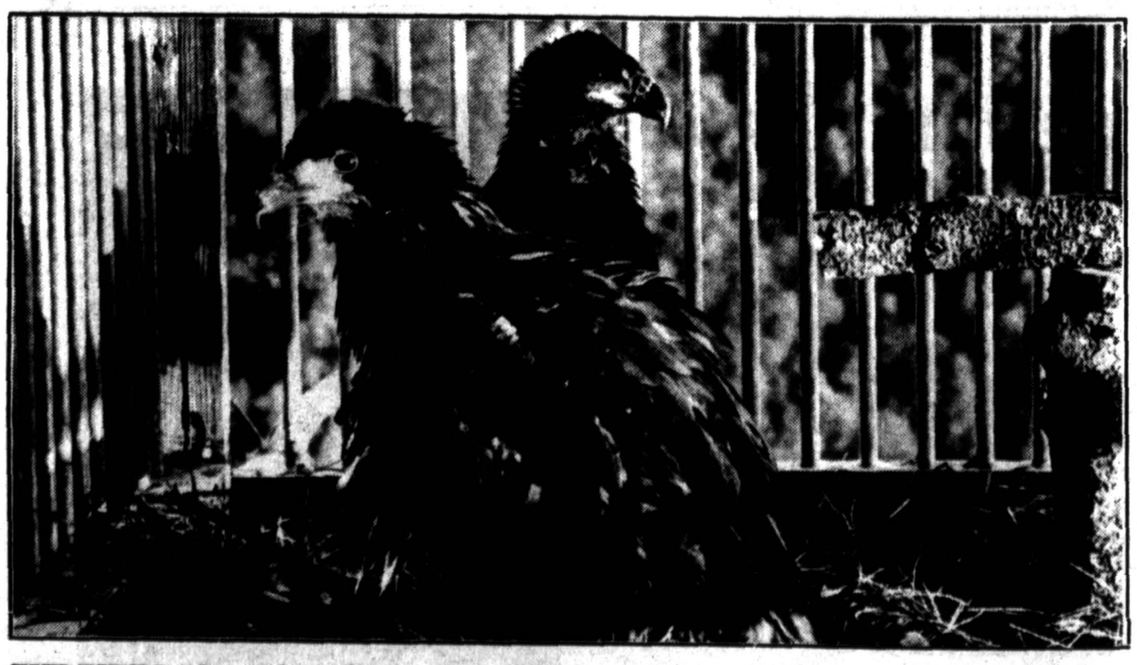
WHILE THE view is spectacular, the walk down the mountainside to the hacksite is strenuous. Twelve separate carriers had to be brought down and back up the 150 yard trail to and from the hacksite. (All photos by Richard Pitnick)



EACH BIRD and carrier is checked and secured before being hoisted by rope and pulley up 30 feet to the top of the hacksite.

CONFINEMENT IN the transport carriers doesn't seem to diminish the pride and elegance of the young birds.

HACKSITE COORDINATOR Kelly Sorenson takes nothing for granted as he removes one of the eaglets from the carrier before placing it in the nest site.



THE BIRDS adapted readily to their new home in Anderson Canyon, according to VWS Research Coordinator Jeff Davis.

Hired cab for 'scenic drive'

PG woman jumps to her death from bridge

By SUSAN BECK

IN AN apparent suicide, Janice Koh, 20, of Pacific Grove, jumped off Rocky Creek Bridge in Big Sur early Tuesday morning, Aug. 24 according to the Monterey County Sheriff's Department.

Koh left no note, but had a history of depression, said a report from the sheriff's department.

The Carmel Highlands Fire Department pronounced Koh dead at the scene.

A local taxicab driver and passerby Steve Landos both witnessed the incident.

Coroner's Sgt. Jim Smith said Koh hired a taxi for a "scenic drive" down the coast. She asked the taxi driver to let her out just north of Rocky Creek Bridge and began walking across the bridge stopping at midspan about 8:30 a.m.

The driver was concerned and followed her in his taxi with his flasher lights on, said Smith. The taxi driver told authorities Koh walked over to the east edge of the bridge and looked over, then back to the west, placed her purse on the bridge and jumped.

Carmel theater up for sale

fore selling it to the Abalone League in 1927.

Following a 1935 fire that gutted the Golden Bough, the owner, Edward Kuster, used the insurance money to purchase state-of-the-art motion picture projection equipment for the theater.

In 1941, according to Sales, Kuster built an additional theater to show foreign films. The owner alternately showed movies and produced plays until the theater burned again in 1949.

Sales said an intimate 150-seat theater called the Circle Theater was later built on the Casanova St. side, and was used in conjunction with the new Golden Bough facing Monte Verde. From 1955 on, the theater was used exclusively as a movie theater.

"A lot of cities are beginning to realize that cultural centers liven the towns and encourage people to come to town," Moorer said, noting that playhouses attract overnight visitors, not just "day-trippers."

Carmel Mayor Ken White said he is "very concerned" that any new use for the site will have minimal impact on residents.

"If we can get live theater in there," White said, "that would bring back a use that this spot had many, many years ago. Live theater would be a wonderful use for that spot."

Landmark Carmel paint store on the selling block

Owner primed for retirement

By SUSAN BECK

THE RED and white sign taped to the inside of the lower right-hand window reads: For Sale — paint store.

The sign, like the kind you buy in the dime store, is as unassuming as the owner of the only paint store in Carmel.

Alvin Chapin has owned Carmel Color Center on Junipero Avenue between Third and Fourth streets for 26 years. Although he still enjoys most aspects of running the business, he would like to retire.

"I've worked long enough," said Chapin, who has had a few prospective buyers show an interest. He does not have the store listed with a real estate firm.

He moved to the Monterey Peninsula from Fresno in 1949 to study hotel and restaurant management at San Francisco City College.

Chapin likes working with people, so his focus was the front desk. He worked for a while as a night auditor at The Lodge at Pebble Beach and then for more than a decade at the Pebble Beach post office.

During that time, Chapin married and started a family. One day he went to buy paint where his store is now (the building has always been a paint store) and saw instead a sign that said "Closed until reopening."

With a little investigation, he discovered the store had gone bankrupt and was being auctioned through the courts.

"I couldn't get off work," said Chapin. "My wife went for me.

She came home and told me I was the new owner of a paint store!"

Starting out

When he started his business, he said, "I thought I knew everything. But it took me five years to get the hang of it. The most common statement I hear is 'I have a problem.' Now, I can answer all of the questions."

Chapin said he has been successful because he always offers quality products. "You can buy cheaper paint," he said. "But you don't get the service and information. My motto is 'The Best Costs Less.' I'm selling paint to the children who came here with their fathers and mothers."

Throughout the years, he has never really had a bad customer. "You can't please everyone. Some people come in and say they don't like me or my paint, but I'm easy-going. Life is too short."

Chapin also said he has never had any trouble with the city. "Well, one time a guy told me to take down a sign. It worked out. Other than that I've always gotten along."

Retirement doesn't necessarily mean Chapin will stop working. In addition to the paint store, he owns a stripping service for painting parking lots and he volunteers a lot of time to various local organizations.

The one thing he probably won't fit into his spare time is painting. "I rarely paint," said Chapin. "I will, but only as a favor. I've never been paid to paint — only in beer. I'm like the shoe repair man whose children were all shoeless. I still have to paint my house."

River Inn's Shadwell

Shadwell worked in his parents' restaurant, but didn't really care for the business. He decided to go to college instead.

Plans interrupted

His plan was interrupted when he was drafted into the Army. "Things changed," said Shadwell after he returned from service in Okinawa, Japan and Vietnam.

He tried being a waiter and bartender, but didn't like it. Then he got a job on a research boat as a crew member. One day he had to fill in as a cook. "I liked it," he recalled.

He decided to move back to Big Sur. "I grew up in Big Sur and want to stay here," he said. "You do what's necessary." Fortunately, he found out he actually enjoys being a chef. Over the years, he admits he has become considerably more even tempered.

"It helps in the kitchen," he said, "for the crew to see that I am in control. It sets the mood. Consequently, I have one of the best crews I've assembled."

He is content working for the only place in Big Sur that is on the Big Sur River and "has the only lawn." The River Inn's atmosphere is casual, and Shadwell's mild manner fits in well.

"I don't mind the busy times," he said. "And, I enjoy the creative side as well. It's also nice when it's quiet and I can stand by the river and think about it."

Six Bells Pub's Webber

He likes making a presentation that people are going to enjoy. "I always say to myself while I'm cooking, 'They are really going to enjoy this.'"

Today, his fish and chips are considered by some to be the best anywhere, including England.

The first year in business was tough, he recalled. The summer went reasonably well, but the winter was terrible. "It takes time," said Webber. "In Big Sur, the locals have a momentum of of their own." And, he added, he ran his business with a stern hand.

"I set a standard as to the way people could behave here. I had a reputation of being really strict," said Webber. "They knew they could not take advantage of me."

Brewery business brewing?

Now he works seven days a week with a crew of two, a bartender and a cook. "When the cook is working, I sell beer (six on tap, eight in bottles) and when the bartender is working, I cook," said Webber, who plans to expand in the near future.

His ultimate goal is to sell his pub and start a brewery business. "I'm cutting my teeth on this business," said Webber. "I'm actually quite a lazy person. I want to retire early and I'm trying to secure my future — that's what this is all about."

Carmel teen tees it up with Michael Jordan

Derek Larson, RLS graduate, says hoop superstar was 'down-to-earth, really funny'

By GARTH MERRILL

WHEN BASKETBALL great and noted golf junkie Michael Jordan is in town looking for a foursome to get his 18-hole fix, who would say no? Certainly not 18-year-old Derek Larson of Carmel.

Two weeks ago, Larson had just that opportunity, as Jordan was in the area with a convention of athletes sponsored by Nike. Derek's father — well-known peninsula banker Clay Larson — had a friend serve as the link to arranging the foursome with Jordan.

They first played with Jordan on Thursday, Aug. 12, and the Chicago Bulls' star enjoyed the day so much he called again for another round two days later.

"I had heard a lot of things about him, about his smart mouth and this and that. I guess I was expecting the worst," Derek Larson said of his first encounter with Jordan.

But Derek was pleasantly surprised, as he noted Jordan was "really funny, very down-to-earth. He was extremely open."

Jordan teamed with the younger Larson both days, giving the son a chance to whip dad with one of the world's most famous athletes as a partner.

'High fives'

"It was great. We were calling each other partner all the time and giving each other high-fives. He was really a wonderful guy," Derek said.

The basketball superstar is also a heckuva golfer, Derek said.

"He was definitely competitive, the way he played. There was a par four hole that's about 280 yards, and everyone lays up because you have only like 10 yards wide to drive to the green," Larson said. "And both times, he drove it. I've never seen anyone hit it so dead-on the line."

"He said, 'I didn't come here to lay up,'" Larson recalled.

DEREK LARSON will never forget the two rounds of golf he recently played with Michael Jordan. (Photo courtesy of Clay Larson)

Jordan told Larson he spends a lot of time on golf, sometimes playing two or three games — 36 to 54 holes — daily.

"I asked him if he did anything in the off-season to stay in shape, any training. He said, 'Golf.' That's all he does."

Larson himself understands the drive. A serious golfer for only three years, he started as a sophomore scrub on the team at Robert Louis Stevenson School. But over the next two years, he played varsity golf and helped his team to two league titles. And this year the team placed fourth in the Nor Cal Championships.

"I love golf now. It's like an addiction," Larson said.

Headed to college

This fall, Larson will be a freshman at Washington and Lee Univ. in Virginia. He said he will study business and play golf.

"They have a pretty decent golf team, so I'll definitely play there," he said.

But he said he also has to keep things in perspective.

"I did not look into golf as a key to college, because I'm not going to take it so seriously as that. It's something I love to do, something I want to get really good at, but it's still something that's just on the side."

Larson is a big young man, well over six feet, with big hands, dark hair and an easy laugh. He is realistic about what he brings to the game, and about what more he needs for improvement.

"I can't have any pro ambitions. I haven't really played long enough," he said. "If I dedicated a whole lot of time to it, I know I could be good. But whether or not I want to take it the next level, I don't know."

He enjoys the game for reasons more simple than prizes or fame.

"It's a very mentally cleansing game. You have a lot of time to think, a lot of time to walk around. It's a very relaxing sport — because you're walking 18 holes and it takes you four and a half hours!" Larson laughed. "Obviously you have some time to do stuff."

One for the ages

Still, if he were to quit tomorrow, he could count as his some memories other golfers might kill for.

LA PLAYA Hotel General Manager Tom Glidden (center in business suit) talks with a union representative shortly after a picket line was set up in front of the Carmel property. (Doug Thompson photo)

Union sets up picket line in front of Carmel hotel

By DOUG THOMPSON

LA PLAYA Hotel General Manager Tom Glidden said he was surprised and caught off guard when an employees' picket line went up in front of the Carmel property shortly after noon on Tuesday, April 24.

A group of approximately 12 picketers — composed of hotel employees and union organizers — staged the march protesting the hotel's alleged refusal to sign a contract that other similar union hotels have ratified. The most recent contract between the hotel and the Hotel Employees and Restaurant Employees Union Local 483 expired on Aug. 1.

The two sides, predictably, have a different take on the issue.

"La Playa's contact proposal falls far under those other agreements with the other union hotels in our industry," said Julius deVera, Jr., president of Local 483. "The owners and operators of the La Playa Hotel must understand that their hotel works because we do."

While deVera said negotiations were making little progress, Glidden expressed surprise that the union responded as it did.

"Negotiations seemed to be going ahead as usual," said Glidden, who is in his fifth year as general manager of the hotel located on 8th and Camino Real in Carmel. "We just opened up renegotations recently and I'm very surprised they showed up like this.

"We'll be having our third meeting Friday (Aug. 27) and these things usually take a series of meetings. We have always had good relations with the union in the past, and I'm sure there will be a quick response to coming up with a new contract."

The union, according to deVera, represents more than 100 La Playa employees and is seeking wage increases as well as maintenance of health benefits.

"We're living off the old contract — we hope to get this done before the summer is over," deVera said.

Jesus Villalobos, who has worked as a pantry man at La Playa for 10 years, said the union "isn't asking for anything more than the other hotels. This is a beautiful place. The happier we are, the longer we'll stay. It's better for them and better for us."

Glidden, while acknowledging important issues remain on the table, says he is confident a settlement will be reached soon.

"I foresee an agreement in the near future," he said. "This hasn't reached the point of a dispute. We're still so early in all of this."

The picket line lasted for more than an hour and Glidden said there were no reports of any disturbances.

Lawsuit promised following denial of harassment claim

By PAUL WOLF

THE CARMEL City Council has denied a sexual harassment claim lodged against the city by Animal Control Officer Valerie Henderson.

The claim, rejected by the council Aug. 3, asks for $100,000 in damages as a result of sexual harassment in the Carmel Police Department.

"The party has been notified (of the council's denial) and the ball is in that party's court," said Carmel City Administrator Jere Kersnar, who could not comment further.

Meanwhile, Henderson's attorney, John Hannon, who is based in Carmel Valley, said a lawsuit will be filed in superior court "within the next month or so."

Chief unavailable

The CPD has referred all comments to Kersnar's office, according to Police Captain Don Fuselier. Chief John McGilvray is out of town until Friday, Aug. 27.

Henderson named three officers in the claim. They are Fay Patterson, Mel Mukai and William Uretsky.

The claim cites acts that have caused "psychological harm for which treatment (was) incurred and medical expenses have resulted..."

Founder of Carmel's Animal Affairs Council set to retire

By SUSAN BECK

MARILYN FARRAR, a founder of the Animal Affairs Council in Carmel, is retiring as head coordinator of the group.

The council was established in 1988 by Farrar and Jo Stallard, Monterey County Planning Commissioner.

At the time, both women were board members of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (SPCA). Stallard wanted to start a group to promote humane education and legislation, and Farrar, who was an SPCA board member for eight years, offered to help.

"I believe in contributing to society," she said, "And, if there is something to do, I'm inclined to do it."

Eventually Stallard became too involved in her position as a planning commissioner, and Farrar took over most of the duties.

Stallard said her idea was to create a broad-based non-confrontational group.

"I thought it would be good to have a group that could combine all of the animal issues," said Stallard, who teaches natural history at the Elder Hostel in Carmel Valley.

Even though she isn't involved with the Animal Affairs Council any longer, she believes "anything that happens for animals is good. The type of education and legislation that the council provides at the grass roots level is needed to explain the problems and solutions of human and animal interaction."

Main task

As head coordinator, Farrar's main task is the mailing list, which alerts the public about everything from animal testing for new cosmetics to the recent postponement of the plan of Alaska Wildlife officials to kill at least 300 gray wolves.

The Animal Affairs Council works with other state organizations and also with groups in Washington, D.C., said Farrar, adding, "We take their information and spread it throughout Monterey County."

The council is not a formal organization, but maintains a mailing list that has increased from 100 to more than 450 in the past five years.

Julie Cota and Lee Hulquist are taking over where Farrar leaves off. "I feel she's still involved," said Cota. "We still defer to her. She knows lots of people and is an encyclopedia of information about animal affairs."

Humane care

Farrar plans to continue promoting humane care of animals.

"It's something I really care about," she said. "Our society is so permeated with violence. We have to have a counter balance of caring. The beginning of cruelty very often begins with the abuse of the environment and living creatures around you. We must respect all life."

People need to become more aware, she said, recalling the incident at Fort Ord recently where a Dalmatian and her pups were left to die. "What were the neighbors thinking?" she pondered sadly.

Farrar recommends persistence in writing letters and making telephone calls to local agencies and legislators to promote a change in the way animals are treated and perceived.

Somehow, she said, if you are doing something positive — even if at times it seems discouraging — it helps.

"It's not just caring about animals," said Farrar. "It's caring about everything."

FBI launches probe into Farr document shredding

closed."

The former staff member said "boxes and boxes of case work were shredded at the county shredder in Salinas under orders from Donna Blitzer."

Blitzer was at the Monterey district office on Wednesday. She said: "We didn't shred anything, but we did remove old files. Names were torn off (of cases) to protect people's confidentiality. Realize that we had 12 years' worth of files. These were recycled through county recycling."

The Carmel man said his case involved the bilking of his wife and child. Through a former partner's financial manipulations, he said, they lost "more than $4 million" in Napa Valley winery interests. He said he contacted the FBI after the former 27th Assembly District staffer told him "two weeks ago" about the purported shredding.

"With Sam Farr in Washington, I wanted to know what would happen to my case. I spoke with (the ex-staffer). In turn," he added, "the FBI got hold of her. I have a tape on which an FBI agent tells me how to deal with media questions." (The voice on the tape urged him to "use good common sense" and describe his situation without being specific and avoid mentioning "the FBI or law enforcement.")

Fear expressed

The ex-staff member said: "After I spoke with the FBI, I started getting strange phone calls — 'dead calls' at home. The phone would ring and no one would speak. I became afraid to stay in my house."

She would not comment on the point of the alleged shredding, but said: "My training was that everything that comes in is supposed to be deposited in boxes for the Sacramento archives. I was surprised by the orders to shred. The orders were followed."

The Carmel man's briefcase on Wednesday held documents weighing at least 20 pounds.

"These are just part of what I gave to Sam Farr's (Assembly) office," he said. "I think my papers are incidental in the shredding. Huge numbers of documents were destroyed. My case isn't the focus."

supervising juvenile probation officer for Monterey County, all three teenagers entered "denials" – parallel to a "not-guilty" plea in adult court.

In an interesting twist, Gabriel said Monterey County Superior Court Judge Robert Hendrick granted media coverage of the event, due to "community interest." He did not allow cameras in the courtroom, however.

Because they are all juveniles, their names cannot be released, nor can they be identified through indirect reference.

According to Gabriel, a pre-trial conference will be held at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 8. She said the conference will include dialogue between the judge, district attorney and defense attorneys.

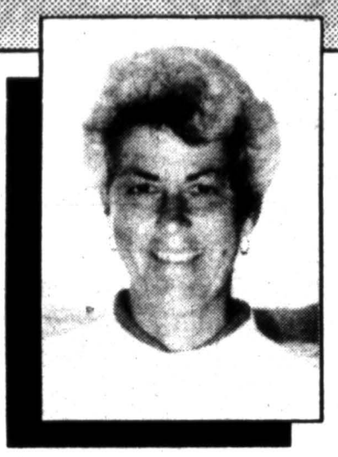
Zing Went My Swing

By DIAN MURPHY

Director of Golf Instruction, Laguna Seca, Rancho Canada, PajaroValley golf clubs



A FAMILIAR statement from my golfing students is "yesterday I hit the ball great and today I couldn't hit anything." Your swing mechanics don't change overnight but your feel and timing certainly can change.

Tempo and timing are based on everything working together. Remember the child's play swing? If it is jerky, it just does not swing. If something makes the chain jerk, you don't get a good swing. This is tempo.

There is a simple key to help you establish a smooth tempo. When I see students whose timing is a little off, I always tell them to slow down the first move away from the ball. You must give yourself time to create clubhead speed and by being very smooth in the first 12 inches of your backswing allows you to correct a lot of mistakes.

Another simple key to good temp and rhythm is to develop a standard routine of addressing the ball. I developed my own procedure. I always approach the ball from behind to see where my target is and pick out my intermediate point. I then set my clubface behind the ball square to my intermediate point and then step into my stance. You need to develop a routine if you don't already have one, because feel changes from day to day.

- Take the club back very smoothly, even slowly, the first 12 inches away from the ball.
- Develop a standard routine of lining up and addressing the ball and stick to it!
- Use time between shots to plan your next shot or to contemplate why you missed the last one.

Peaches 'n cream

A NATIVE of China and actually part of the rose family, the peach – along with the apricot – has been known for as long as 2000 B.C... The peach found its way to Japan, then Europe via Persia and became known as the Persian Apple. It is speculated that Alexander the Great introduced it to the Greco-Roman world, the Spanish brought it to Latin America during the 16th century and during the 17th century it made its way to California. The plant made it to Australia in the 19th century and finally to South Africa in the 20th... what a journey.

The word peach comes from the French peche and in turn from the Latin word Persicum malum (Persian Apple). During the reign of Louis XIV, many wonderful varieties were grown in France by La Quintinie and the fruit was nicknamed téton de Venus or Venus' breast.

The peach is the fruit of a tree, with a velvety fuzzy skin and sweet juicy flesh that is white or yellow in color, and a single stone or pit. (As a side note, I learned the nectarine is a fuzzless variety of peach and they can develop from each other spontaneously as mutations from seed or as bud spores.) The peach season is from June to October.

Peach varieties are divided into two categories depending on how tightly the flesh adheres to the pit, hence the Clingstone (nearly all of which get canned) and the Freestone. While there are thousands of varieties, only about 40 are grown commercially in the U.S. The most popular Freestone varieties are Alberta, Halehaven Golden Jubilee, Redhaven, Dixired, Dixigem, Sullivan, Early Alberta, Keystone, Rio Oso Gem, Jerseyland, Sunhigh and one of the best for the home garden – the Belle of Georgia, according to the books.

The peach is very digestible and has only 62 calories per 100 grams. It is rich in potassium and vitamins A,C, B1 and B2. There are usually four to six peaches per pound. One pound will serve about four people. To remove the skin, just plunge into boiling water for 30 seconds and then into ice water, drain and peel (remembering that the skin contains many of the nutrients). However, us chefs and cooks need to peel them for some of the famous desserts such as the internationally known peach melba (poached peach with vanilla ice cream and raspberry sauce).

In selecting ripe peaches, according to Judith Olney's The Farm Market Cookbook, farmer Martin Glashoff says "it takes a pruning crew a month to go through the orchard. We have real spasms of activity. There's probably six-hundred peaches a tree, twenty-five tons an acre. We start picking the tenth of June. Pack the fruit in Los Angles Lugs and put a shim in between layers so the fruit won't bruise.

Wish customers would give a thought to bruising and keep their little fingers to themselves. They go around squeezing and squeezing - it just burns me. All you have to do is look at the stem end. When it's a clear, greenless yellow all around, it's ripe. And you can tell by the suture (the indent) what type of peach it is. The Rio Oso over there is famous for deep sutures and warts; that pretty smooth one is a Faye Alberta, the Cadillac of peaches."

I promise I will never squeeze a peach again. Another interesting note is that once a peach is picked it never gets sweeter, so avoid green hard ones. The riper the peach the more sugar it has, and an average peach has about 12 grams of sugar.

Peach Bellini

A famous summer cocktail from the famed Harry's Bar in Venice is called a Peach Bellinis. A mixture of fresh pureed peaches and Asti Spumante, the "champagne" of Italian wines, it is a tribute to the family of 15th-century Venetian artists, Iacopo, Gentile and Giovanni Bellini. Serves six.

Ingredients: four ripe, peelable peaches, preferably white, juice of one-half lemon and sugar to taste, 2 tsp. grenadine syrup, one bottle of Asti Spumante, well-chilled.

Peel the peaches and cut them into slices. Place the peaches and lemon juice in a blender and puree. To be perfectly elegant, press the puree through a sieve. Taste, and if the mixture is at all tart, add just a minimum of sugar to make it mildly sweet. Stir the grenadine syrup into the peaches. If you have time, stick the peach puree and Asti Spumante in the freezer for 30 minutes and let the puree turn to half-frozen slush. Mix the cocktail in the proportion of one part peach puree to three parts Asti Spumante (Spoon the puree into champagne glasses. Stir in a bit of Asti Spumante and mix well, then top up the glasses and give a gentle stir.

*If you want a non alcohol version try the same thing with sparkling apple juice sold in the champagne bottle and decrease the sugar. It is refreshing.

It's said that when Madame Récamier, the great French beauty of the 19th century, was ill and refusing all food, her life was spared because she ate a dish of peaches in syrup and cream, which brought back her appetite and will to live.

Without the ATM at the bank building site, Rieman pointed out, the residents of Carmel Valley Village would be without banking service. But, he said, the current lighting is not suitable for the new business or the community.

According to a report submitted to the board on Tuesday, the planning commission found the proposed Baylaurel Corp. project consistent with the Carmel Valley Master Plan and the Monterey County General Plan Policies.

The commission also agreed that the project's visual and development policies are consistent the Carmel Valley Village Mini-Plan.

In other business, the board set Tuesday, Sept. 14 for a public hearing to discuss a proposal by Monterey County Public Works for several improvements at the intersection of Carmel Rancho Boulevard and Rio Road in Carmel Valley.

The improvements are designed to ease congestion around the post office located on Via Nona Maria Avenue adjacent to Rio Road. The project includes two stop signs at Carmel Rancho Boulevard and Rio Road.

Gerald Gromko, director of public works, also recommends two left-turn lanes for motorists eastbound on Rio Road, which averages 15,600 vehicles a day. Carmel Rancho Boulevard averages 14,000 vehicles daily.

The cost for the project is expected to be about $1,000.

LAFCO recommends water/sewer options for Rancho San Carlos

By SUSAN BECK

A REPORT on water service delivery options for development of Rancho San Carlos was submitted for review to the Monterey County Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO) Tuesday, Aug. 24.

Jim Cook, executive officer for the commission, said Rancho San Carlos is a significant project and the special report was submitted because normal procedures for discussing various service options need to be more formalized.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors recently approved to amend the county's general plan and the Greater Monterey Peninsula Area Plan allowing development on the almost 20,000-acre ranch south of Carmel Valley Road.

CUSD board explores plan designed to cut energy costs

By SCOTT BREARTON

SEARCHING FOR ways to reduce energy costs, board members are considering a proposal by a Missouri company that could save the Carmel Unified School District $35,000 per year – once the 10-year plan is paid off.

At a board meeting Aug. 12, members heard an upbeat presentation from Christian Salzmann, operations manager for Viron Energy Services, an energy management company. According to Salzmann, the company – a subsidiary of York International – has provided energy consulting and engineering services to school districts nationwide since 1974.

Locally, Salzmann said Viron has worked with school districts in Sunnyvale, Paso Robles and, more recently, Alisal and North Monterey County.

The first step of the plan was a $4,000 feasibility study approved by the CUSD board in April 1992. Based on results of the study, Viron officials estimated they could save the district $35,000 per year in annual energy costs by retrofitting or upgrading light fixtures, boilers, pilot lights, heating, ventilating and air conditioning equipment.

According to a Viron report, a major benefit to CUSD is "the installation of an energy management system, which will allow trained district personnel to easily control the HVAC (heating, ventilating and air conditioning) equipment, and which could be expanded as building size is increased.

"The net result would be an energy efficient district with an overall reduction in energy use of approximately 16 percent."

"We try to make things run more efficiently by applying new technology to older buildings," Salzmann said.

The actual construction work would be done by local contractors, who would bid on individual jobs, according to Salzmann.

Quelling fears

When board members expressed concern that classroom conditions might be compromised for the sake of saving energy, Salzmann attempted to quell their fears: "We will do nothing to negatively impact the working environment at the schools," he said. "It's a 10-year program we have to work together on."

According to Salzmann, the $35,000 dividend estimate is derived from a baseline figure calculated from a three-year average of district utility bills. However, he indicated a final comprehensive analysis would be needed to determine the final numbers.

At the heart of the proposal is a "performance contract," or guarantee that money saved in energy costs will essentially pay for the program.

Salzmann guaranteed the measurable energy savings from the plan would pay back the $208,000 loan – a one-time start-up expense – and Viron's $6,720 annual support service fee. If not, he said Viron would cover the difference.

The loan is apparently a third-party arrangement which Viron is not involved in. According to Salzmann, the district could seek financing through the lender of its choice and Viron would earn no fees for financing.

Based on a 10-year loan at an interest rate of about 6.1 percent, Salzmann estimated the total annual cost to the district at $31,810, guaranteed to be covered through energy savings.

Carmel teen tees it up with sports legend Michael Jordan

This year, Larson also had the chance to caddie at the AT&T Pro-Am at Pebble Beach.

"Besides the fact that I got to take a week off school, it was nice to get out there, stand around practice and see celebrity, celebrity, celebrity. It was really a great experience."

Larson's personal celebrity at the AT&T was race-car driver Bobby Rayhal.

"That's quite some experience," Larson laughed.

Those are the kind of experiences Larson said he likes to share with his father. The two are very close, a fact Michael Jordan seemed to recognize that spectacular Saturday.

"It was neat, because my dad and I have a very good relationship and he kind of noticed that."

He said Jordan talked a lot about his own father. "It was nothing but praise, about what a great guy he was. He said his father was his biggest fan."

News on his father

Ironically, later that same afternoon, police in North Carolina announced an investigation into the disappearance of his father, James Jordan. The next day, it was announced that the elder Jordan's body had been found in a lake.

"When we found out about his father, after all the neat things he said about him — God, I just felt so bad for him. It was really quite sad," Larson said.

Perhaps Jordan will seek refuge on the golf course. Larson would certainly understand that. He said he thinks Jordan already uses the course to "get away, get out of the spotlight."

And if Jordan requires confirmation of the game's ability to make good things happen, he need look only as far as Derek Larson.

"It was one of the greatest days of my life, seriously, " Larson said.

"It was just so much fun. My dad was out there. He was out there. And I played well. That was just icing on the cake!"

Doris Day's Best Friends

Dental care for dogs and cats

YOU WOULDN'T let a day go by without brushing your teeth, but are you as conscientious about your pet's oral hygiene? Without proper care, your pet is susceptible to abscessed teeth and gums caused by a buildup of plaque and tartar.

The best way to protect your pet from these problems is to start when the animal is still young. Once a day, use a cloth or gauze square to gently rub all your pet's teeth from the gumline to the tips. As he gets used to having his teeth wiped, try using a soft toothbrush with a dab of baking soda or toothpaste made especially for pets (available in health food stores or from your veterinarian).

Just like people, some pets, especially older ones, form more bacteria in their mouths than others. When it is swallowed, the bacteria can irritate the system, even leading to chronic diseases of the liver, kidney and heart.

Preventive care is vital. Your cat's or dog's dental health program should include an annual professional oral exam and cleaning. After the professional treatment, carefully follow a preventive program like the one I've suggested to keep tartar from building up again. Remember – an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure!

Treating hairballs

So many cat owners have stopped me to ask about hairball treatments that I've done some research and have the following suggestions. For occasional problems, my veterinary sources tell me that petrolatum-based products work very well. These include Petromalt, Laxatone, Kittymalt or petroleum jelly (a dab on the roof of your kitty's mouth is all it takes).

For cats that need help daily, increasing the fiber in your cat's diet is a much more natural and efficient way of helping with hairballs. Adding Hill's Prescription Diet Feline w/d to your cat's daily menu would provide four different fibers. This is a prescription food available from your veterinarian. Vetasyl is a concentrated bulk product also available from your vet. A daily pinch of Metamucil or other bulk agent is also of benefit. Many cats will readily eat canned pumpkin as a healthy source of fiber and one teaspoon daily does the trick. Even plain old bran works, mixed in with your cat's favorite moist food. Each cat is different, so you might try these various ideas to find which works best for your Best Friend.

Enjoy your week!

In wake of resignation

Pullen will oversee rec programs on interim basis

By PAUL WOLF

DESPITE RECREATION coordinator Mike Gorczyca's decision to resign effective Aug. 31, Carmel recreation programs will continue, according to City Administrator Jere Kersnar.

The questions now concern whether the one-person department will persist within its current structure, or whether someone will replace Gorczyca permanently in his existing role.

"I have nothing to report," said Kersnar. "I am still checking my options."

Former Recreation Manager Jerry Pullen, who is also the city's personnel officer, will be in charge of the recreation programs until a permanent solution is found, Kersnar said.

The recreation programs are expected to be maintained at least through the current fiscal year because, during the budget process, the city council authorized the recreation department to be spared the budgetary ax.

While the resignation of an employee does not change the status of the ongoing programs, Gorczyca, 29, has become, to many, synonymous with the department.

The city employee of five years informed Kersnar of his decision on Aug. 13. He explained he is leaving to launch a career in the produce business, lamenting the lack of job security he has experienced of late.

MIKE GORCZYA

Gorczyca was not outwardly bitter, although he has been open about the stresses of the past two years — Carmel's first years of city staff cuts. He predicted the citizens will find a way to keep the department intact despite the specter of more cuts to come. "The best part of the job has been getting to know all the people I've met — people who have used my programs and have gotten a lot out of them," he said.

'The best part of the job has been getting to know all the people I've met — people who have used my programs and have gotten a lot out of them.'

— Mike Gorczya

With staff cuts all around him, he ascended to the directorship of his department — but all alone by the time the cuts were through. Several weeks into in the 1993-94 fiscal year budget, the Carmel City Council restored one part-time position to help with the department's operations.

Local garden parties scheduled

TASTE OF Carmel will hold its fifth annual event "The Secret Garden" from 6:30-9:30 p.m., Wednesday, Sept. 8 at the Carmel Valley Ranch Resort in Carmel Valley.

The event will include tastes from Carmel's finest restaurants, wines by Ventana Vineyards and Bernardus Winery and a live and silent auction featuring a round-trip coach-class air transportation for two on Delta Air Lines from San Francisco to Frankfurt.

Every ticket will also have a certificate for a night's stay at Carmel Valley Ranch for $99. Reservations are required by Aug. 30.

The La Playa Hotel's third annual Garden Party to benefit Sunset Center will be held from 1-5 p.m., Sunday, Sept. 12 at the hotel on Camino Real at Eighth streets in Carmel.

The party is designed to offers enjoyment while raising funds to support local arts and cultural activities.

Concours, bedazzle and razzmatazz...

WHOOSH, WHOOSH, the waves at Carmel River State Beach surge against the sand... the lone wolf extends blackly into the diamond strewn Pacific... some tourists toss a frisbee, scattering a conspiracy of gull...

I sit, beneath my new blue beach umbrella (didn't you always want one?) surveying the scene, the keys on my laptop clicking away... a world apart from the man made glamour of the Concours d'Elegance last Sunday...

Yes, I joined the women with stiletto heels, Gucci bags and Paloma sunglasses this time. There we sat, surveying the milieu below: thousands of car buffs scouring over a bedazzling array of the world's most prestigious automobiles. Red ones with mirror-perfect layerings of lacquer. Green ones with calfskin leather upholstery, rims glinting in sunlight...

There we sat, a chosen couple dozen including Jay Leno, Ralph Lauren, mayors, politicians, judges, and sponsors of the event, sipping champagne, nibbling on thick pink salmon fillets, and popping chocolate bon-bons and gold leafed miniature grapes into our mouths. Honestly, I ate gold. It didn't taste like much.

Each of us was greeted at the door with large brimmed straw hats and a personal handshake from our host and hostess, Tom and Margaret Oliver. Edie Karas chose a politician's straw hat with a blue band and Sam sat beside her, looking sad, serious, and lovable as ever.

Dan Albert chose a shaded table around the corner.

"Are you enjoying yourself?" Oliver asked. "Of course," I said. With a feast for the palate, an automotive feast for the eyes, surrounded by celebrities, and watching the sun dissolve the lingering fog... what else could there be? A personal butler to brush the crumbs from my lap?

After a few more chocolate no-nos and adieus to friends, I decided to descend the ivy covered staircase and mingle with the common folk.

The proud owner of a vintage Rolls Royce lounged in the back seat of his car. I snapped a picture. He discovered I wasn't with Fortune magazine and declined an interview.

Then I went straight to the Swan car, a curious apparition as seen from the terrace at the lodge. It turned out to be an actual automobile, perhaps inspired by Cinderella's pumpkin coach, and was trimmed with gilded designs.

Earlier, I had asked asked Paul Woudenberg, the announcer, if there might be an Auburn or a Cord at the show - my all time favs. He wasn't sure at the time, so I was thrilled to see a racy, two-seater boat-tailed Auburn crouched on the manicured lawn. It was hard to keep my hands off the custard yellow paint and tawny leather interior.

Then I went in search of the Monet-purple 1930 Cadillac I'd seen from above. It was imperative that I have my picture taken beside it since I was wearing a similarly colored purple suit.

Ken Eberts was my next stop, at the Automotive Fine Arts Society's Exhibition. He was proud to display his winning painting which depicted an elegant lady beside her 60-something ContinentaL She had stopped for gas at a little backwoods station and was being ogled by a couple midwestern farmers. Eberts said in those days, to the common man, the Lincoln was the greatest status symbol - not the Ferrari.

After leaving the art show tent I noticed a plume of smoke near the judging ramp. As it spread across the field, choking viewers, I feared I was witnessing another great Pebble Beach fire. But it turned out to be the strangest little antique race car. The one-seater was solid gold, with spoked wheels, and shaped like a small missle with smoke pouring from a hole at its pointed rearend. The noise it made was deafening.

About that time, Woudenberg descended from his pulpit and a crowd of car rubber neckers surged behind him. I joined the lemmings and soon heard shrieks, "It's Ralph Lauren's car. He won!" I rubber necked and saw a gorgeous tanned Italian, with teeth sparkling like Niagra, hop into his 1930 Mercedes-Benz SSK and drive around to the ramp to receive his lead crystal trophy and roses.

Thinking he'd have to drive past me, I positioned myself at the other end of the ramp. One of the judges also expected to get a picture of Lauren flying by smiling triumphantly. However, that wasn't to happen. Dozens of viewers broke across the ropes and obscured the view.

"I could get a picture of 26 buns," he said. "Then I could give an award for best buns."

That was my day at the Concours. A day that raised thousands of dollars for United Way's local charities... Think you can do better?

Another drive-by...

This whole automotive weekend thing is getting out of hand. As I sat in a traffic jam that took 35 minutes to creep from Carmel Hill to the mouth of the valley, I wondered what would happen if there was a majorly devastating earthquake. All arteries into the Monterey Pen nsula were clogged: Highway 68 due to the historic races; Carmel Valley road due to the Concours Italiana which I was progressing to; and Highway 1 with people purring into the Concours d'Elegance.

Attendance at these events has become staggering as more events continue to be added. I hope somebody with better traffic sense than I have figures out a plan.

Oh, well...

The Concours Italiana was a gas. The close shaven greens of Quail Lodge Resort and Golf Club were speck-led with Ferraris, Lamborghinis (anything with "ini" on the end, as event founder Francis Mandarano had said

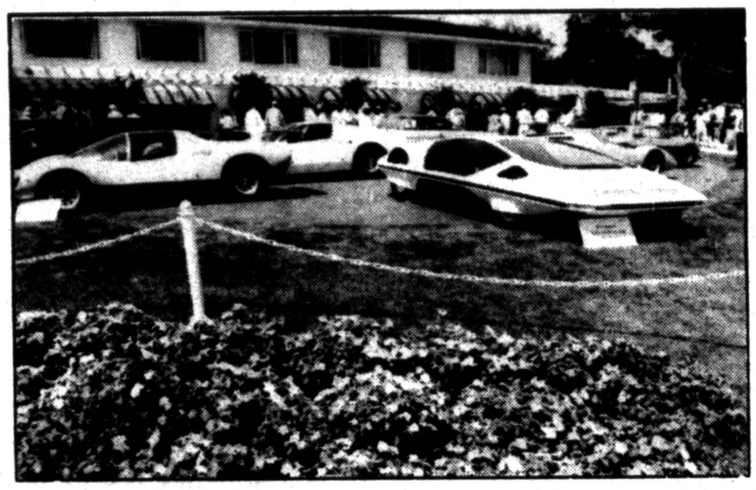
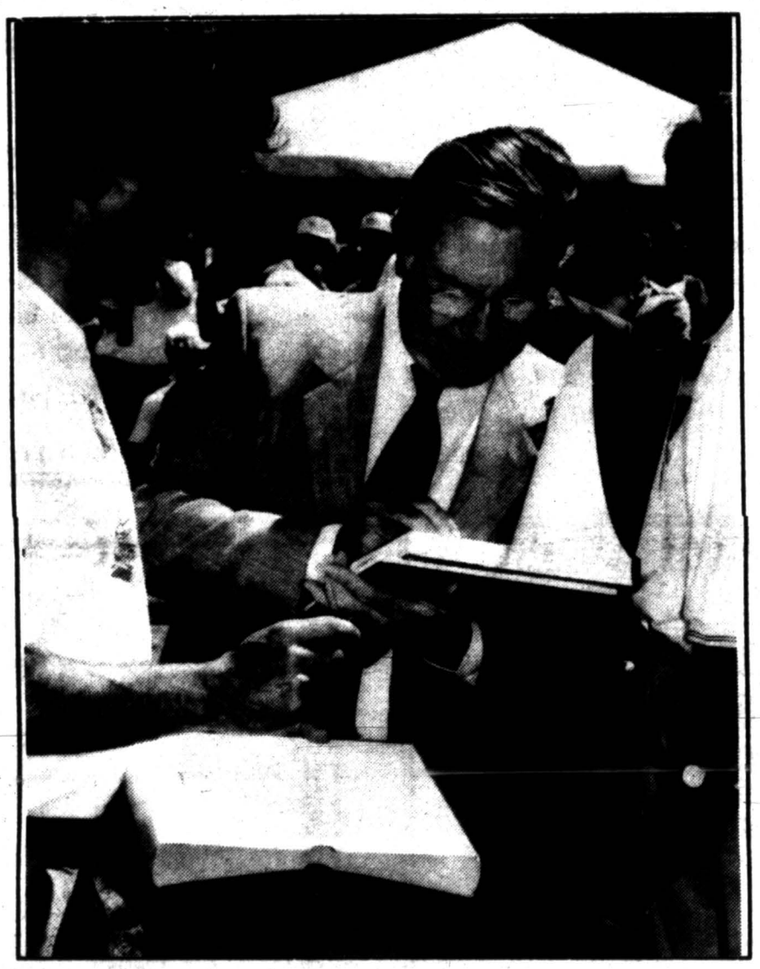
DESIGNER RALPH Lauren basks in the adulation of bystanders after winning best of show at the Concours d'Elegance at The Lodge at Pebble Beach on Sunday. His winning car was a 1930 Mercedes-Benz SSK.

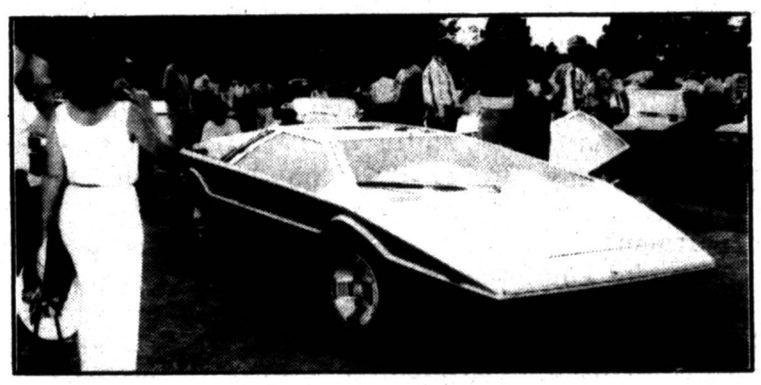


Homage to Pininfarina designs was a display of six Ferraris from different periods.

CARMEL GALLERY owners Marnie and Bill Hartley, with out of town guest Jay Englehart, center, admire their favorite car, a 1937 Packard.

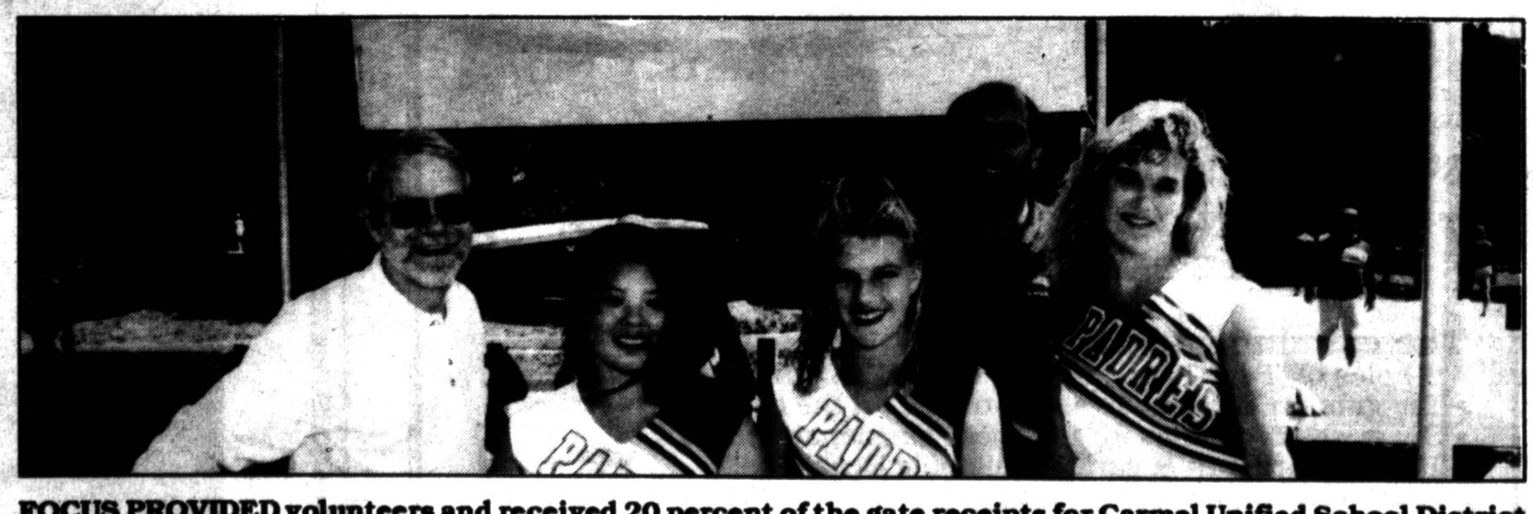


SERGIO PININFARINA signed many books, with re-productions of his company's designs, for spectators at the Concours Italiana at Quail Lodge in Carmel Valley.



THE MASERATI Boomerang drew gasps at the Concours Italiana. Was it something to throw or drive? Could it conceivably drive under a big rig unscathed?

FRANCIS MANDARANO, founder of the Concours Italiana, and his wife, Janet (right), joined Mr. and Mrs. Sergio Pininfarina on the deck at Quail Lodge.



FOCUS PROVIDED volunteers and received 20 percent of the gate receipts for Carmel Unified School District during the Italian event. earlier), Maseratis and other avante garde species of carriage. And Jack Telnack, vice president of design for Ford Motor Company, was there signing up Ford's ghias for next year's show. He was, of course, a gorgeously tanned silver fox draped in white linen and racy Italian shoes.

Dollars were flowing in for Friends of Carmel Unified Schools.

The press was snapping pictures wildly.

There was pizza and tortellini, tirimasu and linguini. And an Italian staffed espresso bar to boot. What a weekend. I'm still revved up from all the excitement... vr-r-r-rooom!

More bows for Virginia Stanton

In honor of Virginia Stanton's 90th birthday, The Noel Foundation presented her with an unexpected gift at Stonepine on Aug. 10. At the dinner, hosted by Gordon Hentschel and his wife, Noel Irwin-Hentschel, $22,500 was awarded to Child Advocates of California in Monterey, enabling the group to open a new school on Monterey Peninsula and provide one year of education for 18 displaced or homeless youths, ages 11-17, currently residing in temporary housing.

Talk about sharing...

Sociable eye openers...

One tourist to another on Ocean Avenue during Concours Weekend: "We're 'sposed to meet 'em at the smelly hog, or some name like that." "It's the Hog's Breath." "Oh, yeah. That's it..."

Also, an idea regarding parking during Labor Day Weekend: Why not stage a Parking Scavenger Hunt? The person with the most parking chalk marks on their tires wins. Or, better yet, the most parking tickets.

And here's a way to get rich quick: hang a sign on your parked car, "Parking space for rent, x-dollars."

...I can't wait for Car-hell to become Carmel again.

Former national poet laureate set to join painter in Carmel benefits

By JOHN DETRO

THIS NATION'S former poet laureate along with a much-praised New England painter will visit locally next month and appear in benefits for Cherry Center, Carmel Public Library and Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation.

The sojurn of poet Mark Strand and painter Neil Welliver was announced this week by Cherry Center overseer Robert Reese.

In 1990, Strand was chosen by the Librarian of Congress to be poet laureate for that year. He's a resident of Salt Lake City.

Living in Maine, Welliver has had work picked up by public collections from New York's Museum of Modern Art to San Francisco Museum of Modern Art and many points between. An exhibition of his paintings and prints — A Litany to the Particular — will open at Cherry Center on Sept. 11 and run through Oct. 8.

"We got lucky," Reese told The Pine Cone. "One of our (Cherry) board members — Lynne Chester — is a friend of Neil Welliver. Welliver and Strand have been pals for years. Strand has written so much about Welliver that the dual invitation seemed natural."

A public reception to mark the opening of Welliver's show will be held from 4 to 5:30 p.m. that Saturday at Cherry Center.

Then a dinner honoring Strand and Welliver will be held at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 11, at the Hyatt Regency Monterey. Strand will speak on A Poet's Alphabet of Influences.

Tickets to the benefit occasion cost $60 apiece. Reservations are required by Sept. 1 (624-7491). There will be a no-host bar at 7 p.m.

On Sunday, Sept. 12, the scene will switch to Santa Catalina School Performing Arts Auditorium from 1 until 4 p.m.

"The two men will have a shared dialogue," Reese said. "They'll conduct an exploration into their individual art forms. The audience will get a reading from Mark Strand's new work, an Emmy-nominated film on Neil Welliver and the talk between the artists and those in attendance."

Skepticism greets energy plan

"The savings that we put into this program are measurable at the meter," he said.

In the event energy savings surpass program costs, Salzmann said the money would be split, with 85 percent going to the district and 15 percent to Viron.

Some were skeptical

But some board members remained skeptical.

"It sounds like smoke and mirrors to me," said CUSD board member Patricia Condren.

Patricia Herro, CUSD board member, said she was interested in getting feedback from school districts who have worked with Viron before approving the project.

"It sounds good, but I feel compelled to find out where you've worked before," Herro said.

The board did not make a decision on the proposal, due to the absence of CUSD President Frank Pinney and the need for more details about the energy management system.

... This is sheer driving bliss.

LAFCO recommends water/sewer options for Rancho San Carlos

WATER from page 19

Development of the property may include 350 residential units, 150 visitor-serving units, commercial and recreational uses.

Four options

The report summarized four options for providing water and/or sewage disposal service delivery to Rancho San Carlos.

The first recommendation, a mutual water company, allows each lot owner of the private water system to a share in the ownership of the company. However, the option is prohibited for Rancho San Carlos because of a county wide policy by the Department of Environmental Health to minimize the creation of new, small and fragmented water agencies.

Another option, a county service area, is an administrative mechanism used to finance services in the unincorporated areas such as Rancho San Carlos. The service area may issue bonds, charge user fees and enter into contractual agreements.

Expanding the Cal-Am Water Co. to accommodate Rancho San Carlos also was recommended. Cal-Am currently supplies water to public and private users on the Monterey Peninsula and Carmel Valley.

Cal-Am draws from the surface water of the Carmel River, alluvial groundwater and the Seaside groundwater aquifer. It is regulated by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

The final suggestion is a private wastewater treatment utility. A privately owned company would be regulated by the California Regional Water Quality Control Board and the local environmental health department. A utility also comes under the jurisdiction of the Public Utilities Commission.

Report's conclusion

Based on the information in the existing Environmental Impact Report and the general plan policies for Rancho San Carlos, the report concludes that creation of a service district would be possible to provide wastewater disposal and water services that would ensure coordinated and managed service on a ranchwide basis.

Cook said the next step is to meet with members of the Rancho San Carlos development team to discuss LAFCO's recommendations.

Obituaries

Eric L. Trist

Professor Eric L. Trist of Carmel died at the Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula on June 4th following a stroke. He was 83.

Born in Dover, England, and lived in Carmel for the past two years.

Trist was educated at Cambridge University, the Sorbonne and Yale University. During the war he was a senior psychologist in the British War Office and an advisor to the British Army's Civil Resettlement Scheme for repatriated prisoners of war. For his war-time work he was awarded the Order of the British Empire in 1946. He was one of the founders of the Tavistock Institute of Human Relations in London and its chairman for many years. He was a pioneer in action-research toward the formulation of sociotechnical systems theory; the conceptualization of self-directed work teams; the formulation of social ecology as a new field of inquiry; and the creation of processes for bringing about change on the individual, group, organizational and interorganizational levels. Underlying all of his theoretical contributions is his innovative work with groups, organizations and communities around the world, reflecting his commitment to social science that is socially engaged in the service of humanity.

Moving to the United States in 1966, Dr. Trist held chairs at UCLA, the University of Pennsylvania and York University in Toronto. He was a world renowned scholar and researcher whose work laid the foundations for what is now known as the "Quality of Working Life" movement.

He was a brilliant and inspiring teacher, mentor and colleague whose influence will be remembered and felt for many years to come. Although his health had been deteriorating, he continued to work until close to the time of his death, editing The Social Engagement of Social Science—a three-volume collection of the work of members of the Tavistock and related colleagues throughout the world.

He is survived by his wife, Beulah; a son, Alan, of Eugene, Oregon; a daughter, Carolyn, of Berkeley; and two grandchildren.

Memorial services were held at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea

June 6. As the son of a seafaring family, who found peace by the sea, his ashes were scattered on the ocean off Point Lobos.

Theresa A. Goldie

Theresa A. Goldie, of Carmel died July 28 at her home. She was 95.

Mrs. Goldie, who was known as Tee Tee, was born Oct. 31, 1897, in San Francisco. A homemaker, she came to Carmel and lived there the past 3 and a half years ago.

She had lived in Sacramento since 1900. She was also a member of Del Paso Country Club and the Tuesday Club, both of Sacramento.

Mrs. Goldie is survived by her daughter, Ione Miller of Carmel; a sister, Agnes Wissemann of Pebble Beach; three grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Services were held at the Little Chapel-by-the-Sea, followed by entombment at East Lawn Cemetery in Sacramento. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests that any memorial contributions be sent to Sutter Hospital in Sacramento, the American Red Cross, the Hospice of the Central Coast, or the donor's favorite charity.

Jean M. Samuels

Jean Mendes Samuels, of Pebble Beach, died Aug. 6 at the Hospice of the Central Coast. She was 88.

Born Nov. 3, 1904, in Russia, she had been a resident of the Monterey Peninsula for 15 years. Mrs. Samuels worked as a bookkeeper for 15 years in New York. In recent years she worked as a volunteer at the library at All Saints Day School.

She is survived by a daughter, Esther Munger of Pebble Beach; two sisters, Ethel Lax and Mae Mendes, both of Pelham, N.Y. and two grandchildren. Her husband, Harry, died in 1968.

Private family services were held, and cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea, followed by inurnment at Beth David Cemetery in Elmont, N.Y. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests that any memorial contributions be sent to All Saints Day School or to the Hospice of the Central Coast.

Marian Townsend

Marian Frances Townsend, of Carmel Valley, a homemaker, died Aug. 4 at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula. She was 80.

Mrs. Townsend was born April 6, 1913, in Montpelier, Idaho.

She had lived for 35 years in Monterey County, 33 of them in Carmel Valley.

She was a 33-year member of St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church in Carmel Valley, St. Martha's Guild and a longtime member of the Altar Guild and of the vestry at St. Dunstan's and a five-year volunteer for Meals on Wheels.

A 1930 graduate of San Bernardino High School, she attended San Bernardino Valley College.

She is survived by three daughters, Shirley Grant of Kailua, Hawaii, Frances Fulton of Carmel Valley and Sandra Miller of Nevada City; a son, Harry of San Francisco; a brother, Theodore Glenn of San Bernardino; eight grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren.

Her husband of 35 years, Harry, died in 1968.

A memorial service was held at St. Dunstan's in Carmel Valley. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests that any memorial contributions be sent to the donor's favorite charity.

Rev. Howard G. Matson

The Rev. Howard G. Matson died Aug. 17 at his home in Carmel Valley after a long illness. He was 86.

Born to immigrant Swedish parents on Jan. 31, 1907, in New York City, Mr. Matson was a graduate in education from New York University and a graduate of Harvard Divinity School. Over his long career in the parish ministry he served churches in Maine, Massachusetts and California. Trained in social work at Ohio State University, Mr. Matson was also director of the Welfare Council of Newark, N.J., and a field representative for the American Cancer Society and the California Association of Mental Health.

Mr. Matson spent half-century as a Unitarian Universalist minister with congregations throughout the United States, retiring in 1971 after a decade with the First Unitarian Church of San Francisco.

In retirement, he spent eight years in a support movement for Cesar Chavez and the United Farm Workers Union, serving on the board of the National Farmworker Ministry. That eight-year advocacy ministry continued a commitment he first made to migrant workers in the 1940s when, as a flight control officer with the Army Air Corps, he watched an Army pilot kill a migrant worker who refused to bend over when the plane buzzed a field of farmworkers.

"That got me interested in migrants," Mr. Matson told The Herald in a 1980 interview when he was named winner of the Ralph Atkinson Civil Liberties Award presented by the Monterey County Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union.

In 1970, he received an honorary degree from Starr King School for the Ministry. In 1978, he was presented the Holmes-Weatherly Award by the Unitarian Universalist Association for his commitment to social justice. The citation contained references to his service with the Fellowship for Social Justice in the early 1930s, his involvement with Martin Luther King Jr. in the civil rights struggles in Selma and Montgomery, Ala., and in his support of the occupation of Alcatraz by Native Americans, as well as his work in creating the Unitarian Migrant Ministry.

Mr. Matson published two books, "The Fourth Wise Man" in 1954 and "A Walk to the Village" in 1980. A third book, "A Walk Through My Mind," is in the process of being published.

A full-time resident of Carmel at one time, he and his wife maintained a second home in Carmel Valley for many years before moving there permanently in 1978.

He leaves Rosemary to carry on the work they have been involved in together for the past 12 years, Soviet-American relations.

A memorial service will be held at 4 p.m., Sept. 5 at the Unitarian Church, 490 Aguajito Road, Monterey.

Following cremation at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea, his ashes will be scattered at sea. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

Mr. Matson asked that those who wish to make a contribution in his memory plant a seedling tree, "preferably in a place that adds much needed greenery to our planet," or give a donation to the Hospice of the Central Coast.

Carmel's George Yates receives Father Farrell Fellowship

CARMEL RESIDENT George Yates was the recipient of the Father Farrell Fellowship from the Carmel Rotary Club on Aug. 10.

Yates was awarded the fellowship for his support of the Father Larry Farrell-Carmel Rotary Endowment Fund during 1992.

Father Farrell was a rotary member until his death in 1983. He left a fund for his friends to celebrate his life, which is the spirit behind the rotary picnic scheduled for Friday, Sept. 17.

Bud Allen, also a rotary member, initially offered a gift to be matched by Rotarians and friends of Farrell. Since then, the fund has continued to increase with $25,000 donated to more than 12 community organizations in the past 10 years.

The Carmel Rotary is a reflection of Father Farrell's life and the way he lived it, according to Joanne Westerling, the club's endowment chairperson. The current goal, according to Westerling, is to build the fund — through gifts and bequests — to $100,000.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Inspired by a New York City exhibit of the works of painter Constance Sampson, age 96, a member of the Arts Council in nearby Putnam County proposed an exhibit with a unique twist: Participating artists would be age 75 or older. Among the first to sign up was Henry Wallace, 82. A retired chemist, Wallace now is a painter, photographer and poet. "It's essential to remain active," Wallace told an interviewer. "You have to contribute to life in order to live."

27th Assembly District

Pine Cone endorses Patton, Whitman

HAVING ENDURED a pair of elections for the both U.S. Congress and the Monterey County board of supervisors, citizens of the area may find themselves becoming weary of the process. Nevertheless, this frequency of elections of late does not detract from their importance. On Aug. 31, the voters will pick among nine candidates competing in an at-large contest for 27th Assembly District.

Winners from each party will progress to the Nov. 2 runoff, which will determine who replaces Sam Farr — the newly elected Democratic congressman.

Gary Patton is the most worthy successor from Farr's own party, although we recognize John Laird, former Santa Cruz mayor, is a close second.

Arguably, the 49-year-old Patton, a Santa Cruz County supervisor for the past 19 years, is perfectly positioned to ascend to the next rung of elected office. But that fact alone is not an adequate foundation for our endorsement — especially in light of Laird's experience, commitment and gracious manner.

Patton offers much of these qualities, accompanied by a peerless record of environmental activism. He has been instrumental in halting off-shore oil drilling, furthering growth-management planning and preservation of the area's farm land.

His assertion that long-term economic vitality is tied to the preservation of the region's natural beauty has been viewed by some as "anti-business." In fact, it underscores integrity in the face of pressures, a desire not to sell out to short-term gains in the name of compromise or "consensus-building."

Each of the candidates would like to lay claim exclusively to the mantle of reformer — with the Democrats, too, committed to cutting waste, consolidating services and furthering local control. Only Patton has recognized the importance of symbolism by rejecting contributions from political action committees (PACs).

This newspaper has been satisfied with Laird's defense of PACs, and we believe that group contributions to elections is a natural extension of the freedom of assembly. However, Patton has shown leadership in recognizing the eagerness for campaign reform throughout the state and then taking a stand.

Laird, a former Santa Cruz mayor and two-term city council member, gives the Democratic ledger two solid candidates from which to choose. Even Marina's Carolyn Plummer, fresh off her seat on the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District, offers refreshing viewpoints on her plan to revamp the educational system. It is our belief, however, that Patton — guided by a grounded realism — best understands his mission and potential impact in Sacramento.

On the Republican side, the field is not nearly as deep or impressive. Susan Whitman looms as the sole candidate who has both credentials and a coherent vision of what's needed from the 27th District representative.

Her main competition will come from the Santa Cruz-based Bruce McPherson, a former newspaperman whose common sense and methodical approach to policy-making will appeal to many. Despite his long record of public service, however, McPherson has never held elected office, which might not be such a liability for lesser jobs. Consequently, his proposed solutions are rarely as sharply defined as Whitman's.

Hers was a strong voice on the Pacific Grove City Council from 1984 to 1992. Even on the council, it was evident Whitman had a particular interest in what was going on at the state level, and her representation on the California League of Cities was an extension of that interest.

As president of the Monterey Bay Division, she lobbied against the state's appropriation of jailing booking fees and property taxes — two traditionally sacred municipal revenue sources. As founding president of the Affordable Housing Corporation of Monterey County, Whitman made a natural progression from small business to local politics.

Whitman is a moderate Republican — in fact, she was a Democrat until 1990 — with a genuine concern for social issues, stressing empowerment over dependency.

It just may be that Patton and Laird are this race's most outstanding candidates. That assertion, plus the fact the district is prohibitively Democratic, leads some to believe the Patton-Laird survivor will most certainly be Farr's successor.

Regardless, a Patton-Whitman runoff would provide voters a distinct choice in November and one that would ultimately yield a representative for the 27th District who has the potential for an immediate impact in Sacramento.

It's people like Bill...

Dear Editor:

Bill Dodge expressed it beautifully in The Pine Cone (Carmel Commentary, Aug. 19) for all of us "newcomers" who are fortunate enough to be living in Carmel.

I "discovered" Carmel in the late 1950s and introduced my wife to the city in 1978. We decided that somehow, someday we would live here. In 1988, we realized that dream.

But Bill left our one other special element (perhaps out of modesty) that makes our town so special. On a visit to Carmel in 1984, we walked into the Bill Dodge Gallery and met Bill. We only bought a poster but he talked to us at length about Carmel and encouraged us to share this special place.

Now nine years later, I see my 6-year-old son, Steven, experiencing the same magic that we feel. He loves to get the mail with me every day. If there's a problem, Linda at the post office lets him go back and get it with her. Then he can visit Mary Jane and Jason at Le Bijou and pet their dogs and finally we go to Bill's gallery so he can see what Bill is working on.

Bill always takes time with Steven. When Steven took his first art class and brought his paintings in to show Bill, he was thrilled with Bill's kind words and encouragement.

In short, what Bill left out was that it is people like him who make Carmel an even more unique place to live. If he ever leaves, he will truly take a piece of Carmel with him.

Voters must follow rules

Dear Editor:

After another very close election, it is necessary to again remind Monterey County voters of the need to carefully follow instructions when voting.

The race in the 5th Supervisorial District not only emphasizes the importance of every vote, but strongly reminds voters that they must follow the rules of the voting system in order for their votes to be counted.

The Datavote voting system used in Monterey County is very easy to use. Absentee voters need only punch out the pre-scored hole to the right of the candidate's name.

However, some voters mark their ballots with pens or pencils, or punch holes with hole punches. Our computer can't read those ballots. We spend many hours duplicating these ballots to insure that the voter's choices are recorded. Precinct ballots must be punched with the marking device in the voting booth or the vote will not be counted.

Several voters in the last election wrote their names, initials or messages to the candidates on their ballots. Identifiable marks make your ballot void. Never write anything on your ballot unless you are voting for a write-in candidate and, remember, if the ballot says "Vote for one," you will also invalidate your ballot if you vote for two or more.

The Monterey County Election Department goes to extraordinary lengths to insure that every vote is counted. Please make sure that you do your part by following instructions.

The loss of KBOQ

Dear Editor:

I wonder if the "players" who contributed to the loss of radio station KBOQ to this area understand the depth of their deeds.

To have removed the only classical station from the Monterey Peninsula is sad enough. To replace KBOQ with acid rock theme noise identified With our drug culture is arrogant and insulting.

Shame on all the players! Shame on all their houses! Those of us who suffer this loss (and we are many) won't advertise and won't support those who do advertise. Instead, we look forward to the swift and silent demise of KROC.

Fan of Carmel, Doris

Dear Editor:

I am writing to say how much my husband and I enjoyed our visit to California, especially Carmel. I am 50 years old and have been a fan of Doris Day since a young girl. I remember how happy I used to feel coming out of the local cinema after seeing one of her films, and for days after singing her songs and seeing her infectious smile.

So when I knew we were coming here, I hoped to have a peep at her house. But after asking a lovely lady in the library, she told me it was an unwritten law to not pass her address on. I accepted her word and I was handed a copy of your paper to read her column.

Not being able to see her house left me a little disappointed, but I was happy to have seen how pretty Carmel is, and wouldn't have missed it for anything.

Analyzing the Assembly race

FOR VOTERS to discover how the nine Assembly candidates differ, they must first wade through a number of platitudes that are helping to define the political mood of the moment.

The slogans and talk of change say something about politics in the 1990s. But voters may have trouble choosing a replacement to Sam Farr in the 27th Assembly District so long as there is an observable bandwagon of new political thinking.

The question emerges, Are we witnessing the campaign equivalent to politically correctness, or has there emerged a new consensus on the direction the state needs to go?

Consider that Democratic candidates John Laird, Gary Patton and Carolyn Plummer advocate streamlining government, reducing the regulatory burden on business and increasing local control in education. These goals have traditionally been expressed by Republicans.

Remarkably, Plummer's strenuous opposition to raising taxes and to heavy-handed state government hasn't seemed out of place in this election.

And Republicans Susan Whitman and Bruce McPherson sound more like reformers than stay-the-course conservatives as they speak of redefining government and scaling back its role for the new decade.

Consider Whitman's campaign brochure, which says, "Unlike most political candidates today, Susan Whitman has a specific program for change."

Change is the buzzword

With all the state's problems, change has been the ticket to run on. Certain themes weave through everyone's discourse: restoring public confidence in government, trimming bureaucracy, and improving local control over policies, programs and use of funds.

It's become a trite statement in this campaign to say that economic and environmental goals can go hand in hand. But one must wonder the degree to which this is true. Do not the interests of environment and business clash constantly in the battles we witness at the local level? Is it simply easier for politicians to make such an assertion, or are they simply recognizing we must pave the way toward creative public-private partnerships?

Gary Patton, the best recognized environmentalist of the lineup, argues limits must be put on business for the good of the whole. Nevertheless, even Patton won't talk long about the environment before he mentions the economy. He asserts the long-term interests of business are boosted through environmental protection efforts.

In a recession, people get nervous when any candidate talks about the environment but fails immediately to mention the economy.

As for immigration, the verdict among all nine candidates is that it's very good if legal, very bad if illegal.

'People's candidates'

The 27th District Assembly field presents an array of "people's candidates," individuals avoiding the taint of the political establishment.

Even Patton — the Santa Cruz County Supervisor who arguably falls nearest to the category of "professional politician" — maintains his campaign, more than the others, can be called "grass-roots." The reason? He is not accepting political action committee (PAC) money.

Patton has made good use of symbolism at a time when the populist is considered clean. The only danger in not accepting PAC money has the potential to remove one from the mainstream. Key figures in this race are proud to be "moderate Democrats" and "moderate Republicans." Perhaps hard-liners and idealists will remain scarce in the 1990s.

In the end, middle-of-the-road sloganeering may say quite little. A liberal can be a "fiscal-conservative," but that doesn't say where they would make cuts in a tight budget. A conservative can speak of empowerment instead of dependency, but by what means are people to be empowered.

This kind of detail is rarely revealed at the candidate forums or in newspaper articles. Candidates who can offer detailed answers for these questions are more worthy than their opponents who elaborate with more cliches.

The ills of the two-party system are enough under attack right now that Independent candidate Jerome McCready and the Peace and Freedom Party's Susanne Espinoza gain no particular advantage. Each candidate would like to be viewed as presenting an alternative candidacy, unsullied by the present leadership in Sacramento.

So would the others, but with all the advantages of party ties. In fairness, each candidate apparently would take on Sacramento, and in a variety of lonely battles. Each stresses something different.

For Whitman, she'd join the state legislature to better fight it — to persist in the cause she took up as a Pacific Grove Councilwoman: to keep the state out of

Illegal immigration issue boiling

MILLIONS OF people in America's heartland are feeling the devastating effects of the Midwest's worst flooding in 500 years. In response to the human emergency in Illinois, Iowa and Missouri, President Clinton has pledged the federal government's assistance in helping the flood victims rebuild their lives and restore their economy.

Now, it's time for President Clinton and the federal government to face another kind of flood — the flood of illegal immigrants — and help California cope with this human tidal wave that threatens to inundate our economy and the quality of life for all who live here.

Californians understand that illegal immigration is a problem for our state. After all, half of the illegal immigrants in the entire country are here. But while illegal immigration has become a state problem, it is a federal responsibility, and the President and the Congress are not facing up to their responsibility.

Every year, California is forced to spend nearly $3 billion on the illegal immigrants who have come here. We have no choice, for the federal government mandates that we provide health care, education and other benefits to illegal immigrants with the promise that Washington, D.C. will reimburse us later.

Yet, they have never paid us for what they have required us to spend.

Now, libraries are closing and aid to the elderly, blind and disabled is being cut while we are compelled to pay for social services for illegal immigrants. This is simply wrong.

More important, the costs of illegal immigration have severely hampered our state's ability to educate our children. In truth, immigration reform is an education issue, and we can no longer ignore its impact on the children who already live here.

I have devoted my life to the education of California's children, and I have seen our precious state resources sapped by the costs of illegal immigration. In just the past five years, those costs have doubled to over $1 billion a year.

Think about what we could do with the $1 billion we spend on illegal immigrants in California's schools:

- We could fully fund 1,000 classrooms of students.
- We could enroll an additional 67,000 four-year olds in preschool.
- We could hire 25,000 teachers.
- We could put a computer on every 5th grader's desk.

At a time when we need to build one classroom every day to accommodate enrollment growth, we cannot afford to drain away a billion dollars from our children's classrooms.

Gov. Wilson has proposed important reforms to stem the tide of illegal immigration into our state and nation, and he made the point that massive illegal immigration will continue as long as the federal government continues to reward it. That is why the President and the Congress must address this problem now.

President Clinton did the right thing in helping the flood victims of the Midwest. He should now address the human flood of illegal immigrants into California.

It's time that the federal government acted so that we can better serve the people of California.

Agency officials to seek funding for freeway alternative

What happened was this: No one wished to lose the $41 million or the chance to develop some kind of traffic solution, whether the freeway or something else.

Opponents of the freeway — including, for starters, representatives from Carmel, Monterey and the county's 5th District — supported the action for two reasons:

One, there is the hope that the CTC will approve the request as presented; two, many are deeply skeptical the controversial Hatton Canyon freeway could ever be built.

"With all the litigation one can expect, it is my opinion the freeway will never be built in its current alignment," said TAMC Chairwoman Barbara Shipnuck, who is 2nd District Monterey County supervisor.

Likewise, TAMC supporters of the freeway voted for the motion for two reasons of their own:

First, some kind of project is better than none, they reasoned; second, the CTC is liable to find better use for the $41 million, and the freeway would once again be the county's project of choice.

Caltrans opposition

But the drama Wednesday was not merely the split on the 17-member panel.

The California Department of Transportation, directed earlier this year to design a Highway 1 widening project and bring it back for study, was immovably opposed to anything other than the freeway. It is Caltrans that designed and has, in effect, lobbied hard for the now-familiar freeway proposal known as "1-C modified."

On hand Wednesday was Gregg Albright, the freeway's project coordinator, giving a presentation to TAMC members on a widening project called "4/6." The project name refers to its proposal to have six lanes from Carpenter to 1,000 feet south of Ocean, and four lanes to Rio.

It was an odd case of an official making a pitch for something he didn't believe in.

Albright slammed the alternative on all grounds, criticizing the project's features relating to service levels, safety and cost-effectiveness. "There is no alternative to Hatton Canyon that will work," he repeated.

However, Gary Black, an engineer representing the Hatton Canyon Coalition, which opposes the freeway, described the project as sound and adequate.

Black took part in the design of "4/6" alongside of Caltrans. The county staff also had a representative, and TAMC had observers at many meetings to ensure the engineers were carrying out the direction of the panel.

At this particular meeting, there was no such thing as objective information. The issue was clearly politicized not just on the panel, but among the traffic engineers themselves. Even such topics as growth projections, levels of service and safety standards reflected the biases of such experts as Albright and Black.

BARBARA BROOKS

Nor was any reliable answer to the question of whether the CTC would fund the widening project and secure for the county the balance of the funds. Caltrans officials were skeptical, while people like Barbara Brooks, Carmel's TAMC representative, were confident.

"I think this is a step forward," Brooks said after the vote. "You do have to remember this is a unanimous action for an alternative to the freeway."

Brooks was suggesting that the CTC will be favorably influenced by the commitment shown in the TAMC's unanimous vote.

Meanwhile, as the meeting was breaking up, Lois Starnes, a leader with the freeway-booster group, Citizens for Hatton Canyon, was smiling ear to ear. "The CTC will not support a project Caltrans is against. That means we will get the freeway."

City denies sexual harassment suit

It continues: "These acts have included asking claimant to perform sexual acts, asking about her sex life, touching her, and engaging in a pattern of discriminatory conduct based upon her sex."

Henderson referred comments Hannon. In a telephone interview with The Pine Cone, Hannon said, "They (the city) have basically blown off this case. I find it surprising that in this era, they would just sweep this thing under the rug."

The council discussed the claim with City Attorney Don Freeman in closed session on Aug. 3. It rejected the claim in open session that afternoon.

Personal Perspective

the cities' budgetary pie. Laird would fight "special interests." Patton would restore public faith in state government. And McPherson would be an "independent thinker," a Republican but beholden to no party line.

The key to understanding the candidates may lie in discovering their different areas of emphasis.

Ask Plummer about encouraging economic recovery and she will elaborate on a "well-trained work force." As a Monterey Peninsula Unified School District board member, she is liable to come across as a one-issue candidate.

Patton, of course, stresses the environment. That is a broad subject Whitman does not spend much time discussing. Her background is in small business, and her introduction to the political scene was by way of the business world.

Laird has been everything from lobbyist and party official to delegate, project director and elected office holder. So it is not surprising he discusses policy in a technical, almost encyclopedic fashion.

In the race for 5th District Monterey County supervisor with candidates Sam Karas and Jeff Davi, the choosing was much easier on the voter.

In the current Assembly race, it is hard to see passed differences of style, approach or emphasis. The bread-and-butter campaign rhetoric provides more information about where they agree than disagree.

Patton's army — of admirers

Dear Editor:

Gary Patton is well qualified to serve in the State Assembly, and will represent the people of this district very well.

Patton has been elected supervisor in Santa Cruz County since 1975. Unlike other candidates who promise environmental protection before being elected, Patton's record is tried and true. Although facing numerous fights and threats over environmental concerns from powerful special interest groups, like developers as well as the timber and oil industries, Patton has always placed the welfare of the environment and the people of his district first and foremost.

For example, he has fought to stop the logging of a rare old growth redwood forest at the Gray Whale Ranch in Santa Cruz County, and organized the local government coalition that successfully stopped offshore oil drilling along nearly the entire California coast.

Patton believes jobs and the environment go hand in hand. He strongly supports such environmentally friendly jobs as bringing the train to Monterey, and creating an effective mass transit system on the Monterey Peninsula that will get many cars off our roads. Instead of building large new freeways, which will only accommodate more traffic, Patton is for creating a statewide system of high speed trains that will mean skilled, high paying jobs.

Patton is very concerned about people as well. He has a strong record of supporting affordable housing, day care centers and educational opportunities for the poor.

Gary Patton will work hard for the people of this district. He deserves our support.

Beautiful dogs and horses claim spotlight time

Carmel Valley Ranchers' Days due.

By JOHN DETRO

ANIMALS CLAIM the spotlight as this week's Leisure Scene unfolds: beautiful dogs, high-quality stock involved in ranch work, steeds known as "the dancing white stallions of Vienna."

Let's start with those eye-pleasing pups—

Del Monte Kennel Club's All Breed Dog Show and Obedience Trial will be held on Saturday, Aug. 28, at Carmel Middle School.

Open to the public without admission cost, the occasion will call out a distinguished panel of American Kennel Club judges including Joe Tacker of Carmel Valley (best in show), Sunny Dutton (sporting group), Judy Doniere (hounds), Mrs. Edd Bivin (working dogs), Robert Moore (terriers), Mexine Bean (toy), Alexander Schwartz Jr. (non-sporting), Richard Guevara (herding), Jon Cole (miscellaneous).

Judging in the confirmation and obedience rings will begin at 8 a.m. with variety group judging scheduled to start at 3 p.m. and best in show about 5 p.m.

Part of the funds from entry and parking fees will be donated to Carmel Middle School Development Fund. Santa Clara Valley Kennel Club will hold its show at the same location on Sunday, Aug. 29.

The Del Monte event is expected to draw "some 3,000 entries from all over the country," spokesperson Constance Coleman said in conversation. "It's quite an important show on the circuit — exhibitors like our trophies and love the Monterey Peninsula. They travel all over in RVs, and consider the Del Monte a real treat."

The club will have an education booth on the grounds, she added — one which will offer data on dog ownership, animal therapy and where to buy. "Getting a dog is like having a child. They're not disposable; one must be prepared."

CARMEL VALLEY Ranchers' Days will happen Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 28-29, at the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club on East Garzas Rd.

"This special time was created to preserve and demonstrate the talents and traditions of local ranches," says the organizing team's Tootie Truesdell.

"Hundreds of cowboys and cowgirls have been invited to show off their talents in such events as team roping, calf branding, team penning and working cowhorses in the style of this valley's ranchers."

Entries for all events will be taken from 7 to 10 Saturday morning. There will even be a stick-horse race for children six years and younger.

The All Around Champion will win a new two-horse trailer, courtesy of local ranchers and business people.

Each morning from 7 to 9, a pancake breakfast will be cooked up. Western barbecue will be served each day from noon until dark ($8).

Cowboy arts and crafts will be available for purchase along with souvenir tee shirts and sweatshirts. All proceeds will be shared by local charities, Truesdell says.

Admission is free. Competition will start at 8 a.m. each day. Information: 624-2425.

THE DANCING white steeds mentioned above? Well, the Wonderful World of Horses — starring those famed Royal Lipizzaner Stallions — will occupy Pattee Arena of Monterey Fairgrounds this weekend.

Specific showtimes: 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 28, and 2 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 29.

Tickets cost $13.50 (adults) and $11.50 (children 12 and under and seniors 60 plus). Some VIP seats are available at $15.50 apiece. For advance purchases, call Monterey County Theater Alliance (655-3200).

A Disney movie depicting the rescue of Lipizzan stallions from Czechoslovakia by Gen. Patton made the horse famous. Experts call it "the aristocrat, the royalty, the light and nimble dancer of the equestrian world as well as the aerialist with their spectacular leaps into the air."

The show troupe's objectives: "To retain and cultivate the art of horsemanship in its highest form and to present these Lipizzaner horses to the general public as well as include many other show breeds in its performances."

Familiar TV series faces star in area 'Love Letters' benefit

SUPERMAN WOULD be glad to know that his old flame Lois Lane is alive, well and preparing for a Monterey Peninsula stage show.

It's a one-night-only benefit for American Lung Association of the Central Coast (ALACC) with Maggie Eastwood as event chairperson.

Local actress Phyllis Coates, the original Lois Lane in the 1950s Adventures of Superman television series, will work with TV and film star Alan Young in the two-character Love Letters by A.R. Gurney. (Young, of course, played Wilbur in the Mister Ed TV series and was the voice of Walt Disney's Scrooge McDuck.)

PHYLLIS COATES

The curtain will rise at 8 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 28, in Monterey Conference Center's Steinbeck Forum. Holywood actor/director Bart Williams helms the outing.

Individuals who desire preferred seating should call ALACC right away — 373-7306. Other tickets are obtainable through Monterey County Theater Alliance (655-3200). If there are any left, they will be offered at the door Saturday evening.

Love Letters tells the story of two friends — Andrew and Melissa — who share the best and worst of growing up and growing old through decades of written correspondence.

"This play is extremely popular with audiences all over the country right now," said ALACC Executive Director Karen Fulton.

"We were fortunate to get the (performance) rights and these fine stars. It's very exciting to offer a production of this quality."

Specifically, she said, proceeds will aid ALACC programs "for lung disease research and education."

There will be a champagne reception after the show.

MPC PLAYERS will present fine local actress Rosamond Goodrich in Wings from Sept. 3-26 at Cherry Foundation in Carmel, it was announced this week. Director: Nick Zanides.

In the play by Arthur Kopit, Goodrich will portray Emily Stilson, former aviatrix and stunt pilot who suffers a stroke in her 70s. She retains memories, but her mind is short-circuited and she no longer can communicate.

There will be a preview at 8 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 2. And then Wings will be staged at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 2 p.m. Sundays.

Tickets cost $12 (general), $10 (students, seniors, military). Reservations may be made through the Theater Alliance; call 649-6421 if you wish group reservations.

Meanwhile, auditions for Cobb will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 28-29, in the Main Stage Theater at Monterey Peninsula College. The MPC Theater Company production will be directed by Peter DeBono and seen Oct. 14-30.

The all-male cast needs one African American between the ages of 25-40 and three Caucasians — 18-25, 35-45 and 55-70.

Written by Lee Blessing, Cobb examines baseball great Ty Cobb at various stages of life. The Cobbs contend with each other, the audience and Oscar Charleston (dubbed "the black Cobb") over questions of identity.

Daffy duffers in Pebble Beach

Leisure Scene: Goofy golf will benefit the Cancer Society

LEISURE from page 33

And why not? American Cancer Society (ACS) will benefit.

Start time is 6 p.m. Friday, Aug. 27, at Peter Hay Golf Course in Pebble Beach. Highlights: nine holes of "attempted golf," tee gifts on every hole, "live music to keep you swinging" and a barbecue dinner.

Jeanne Fischer of ACS in Salinas spells out the situation this way:

• Come attired as your favorite sports figure. Prizes will be given for "the most original non-golfer look."

• Bring one club — "your favorite short club for those troubled fairway shots." Clubs for the tees and greens will be provided.

• Bring a golf bag for your club and tee prizes.

Participants can put together their own group of 12 or sign up as a twosome. A donation of $146.46 for a two-person team includes golf, gifts, dinner party, games, prizes.

Spectators and hecklers can join in for $34.46 each. Includes dinner party and games.

To enter, call Bella Brancato at 1-442-2992. Co-chairpersons are Don Faimann and Gail Rider of the Club 19 golf program and Mark Oman of Golfaholics Anonymous.

Grand name: O'Grady

Meanwhile, the second annual Johnny O'Grady Classic Pro-Am Golf Tournament will be held Friday, Aug. 27, at Corral de Tierra Country Club to benefit Multiple Sclerosis Community Services of Monterey, San Benito and Santa Cruz counties.

The picture: 120 amateur golfers will compete for prizes while 30 professionals compete for a $7,000 purse.

"This is one of the few Pro-Ams in our area," says Corral pro Gerry Greenfield. "Top pros from Northern California have been invited; some of the best will play."

The entry fee of $150 includes green fees, tee prizes and dinner for two at the awards ceremony. Registration and lunch will begin at 11 a.m. followed by a 12:30 p.m. shotgun start.

A 6 p.m. cocktail reception will precede dinner at 7 p.m. To obtain more details or enter the competition, call 1-758-1663.

THE WORKSHOP is called Dreams: Language of the Soul.

Based on audiotaped talks by Jungian analyst Marion Woodman, it will highlight a session sponsored by Monterey Peninsula Friends of Jung at 7 p.m. Friday, Aug. 27, at 284 Foam St. in Monterey.

Included will be commentary and questions to elicit audience response by Dr. Evalyn Dundas. Call 649-4018 for registration; donation suggested.

MONTEREY PENINSULA Chamber of Commerce and Convention Bureau will hold its fourth annual Hoedown Showdown Auction and Western Barbecue starting at 5:30 p.m. Friday, Aug. 27, in the Doubletree Hotel's DeAnza Ballroom.

The word: "Put on your favorite Western garb and get ready to bid for the best deals in town" — vacations, dinners, golfing, services, retail merchandise.

Silent auction bidding will start at 5:30 with the barbecue at 7 and the live auction an hour later. The cost ($30 per person) includes dinner and beer/wine reception from 5:30 to 6:30. "Tables in rounds of 10."

THE CONTEMPORARY folk duo called Fine Friends will perform at Big Sur's Pacific Valley Cafe and Bar (two miles north of Sand Dollar Beach) from 8 to 10 p.m. Friday, Aug. 27.

Next afternoon from 12:30 until 2:30, they — Jai Moore and Dave Campbell — will be at Nepenthe's Cafe Kevah.

Granite Rock Quarry's Pops and Rocks Festival — that site's near Aromas — will feature David Crosby and Graham Nash at 7 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 28.

Tickets for the event may be obtained through Granite Rock at 1-724-5611, Ext. 27 or at any Granite Rock supply store.

Rock legends Crosby and Nash have been in the music business for more than a quarter century.

Gates will open at 5:30 p.m. with food booths available. The quarry is alcohol-free under federal mining law.

Finally, Gary Puckett and Union Gap will perform at Santa Cruz Boardwalk's free summer concert series on Friday evening, Aug. 27.

There will be two shows — at 7 and 8:30.

If you missed her in February, don't miss her at the Pine Inn this week!

Appointments necessary

Youth orchestras put out word: it's audition time

YOUNG MUSICIANS are encouraged to audition for a place in the Youth and Honors Orchestra of Monterey County — a two-tiered orchestra based on proficiency levels.

The auditions will occur from 10 a.m. until 9 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 28-29. Interested musicians should call 375-1992 for an appointment and additional details.

Potential orchestra members will be asked to play a five-minute piece of their choice, play a scale, sight read.

The 1993 season will be conducted by John Larry Granger. The orchestra will have four performances (one each in November, December, March and May).

Every year the Honors Orchestra has a joint concert with a professional orchestra (Monterey County Symphony the past four years). This time, the Youth Orchestra will be traveling to Marin County for a joint weekend retreat with the Marin Youth Symphony.

Both tiers will rehearse weekly on Wednesdays at San Benancio School — the Youth Orchestra from 4:30 to 6:00 p.m. and the Honors Orchestra from 7:00 to 9:00 p.m. Rehearsals will start Sept. 22.

"There are a limited number of openings in both orchestras," spokespersons say.

Taste Buds

Le Coq D'Or— dining at its finest

TUCKED AWAY on the east side of Mission Street between Fourth and Fifth Avenue lies one of the best-kept secrets in Carmel.

When my fiancee and I approached the entrance of Le Coq D'Or, we had no idea we were about to partake of one of the finest meals we had ever experienced. The building's simple exterior belies the wonders inside.

We knew this European country restaurant was different when we were greeted outside the door by the proprietor, Annelore Parsons. When seated, we immediately noticed the European hospitality, a distinct sensation of being invited into someone's home.

Our waitress spoke with a wonderful German accent, adding to the cozy ambiance of this small dining room. Warm peach tones helped highlight the warmth of a close, intimate dining experience.

We started with a glass of white wine to go with the wonderful toasted her and garlic-topped croutons with a delectable chicken liver pate. Annelore informed us that the already extensive wine list was only partial, that her complete selection of fine domestic and imported European wines was being compiled, yet to be printed.

White wines include such labels as Mirassou, Estancia, Chateau St. Jean and William Hill. For red wine lovers, Annelore recommends George Duboeuf Chateau Neuf du Pape, a fine French selection.

"We also have a good selection of California Merlots and Chardonnays," she added.

Long history in Carmel

Annelore informed us that Le Coq D'Or had a long history in Carmel, dating back to the 1960s when a Swiss couple operated it. She and her 30-year-old daughter, Lorie, the chef, are excited about having brought the restaurant back to Carmel, making it even better than before.

Spending long hours training in Europe, Chef Lorie knows that work can pay off.

"Lorie had always been interested in the culinary arts, being that she grew up in the restaurant business with me," Annelore said. Opting for a full three-year apprenticeship rather than spending just one year training in a German restaurant, Lorie spent one and a half years in Dusseldorf (in the Rhineland) and two years in Garmisch-Partenkirchen in upper Bavaria near Munich. She started at the bottom, scrubbing pots and pans, according to her mother.

When asked to characterize the menu, Annelore responded, "European country cuisine, a mix of French, German and Italian."

Our mimosa salads came next; a simple mix of butter lettuce topped with crumbled egg, parsley and fresh ground black pepper on a chilled plate. The house vinaigrette boasts a hint of Dijon mustard, one of many extra touches that makes Le Coq D'Or stand out among the rest.

Though not rushed, shortly after we set our salad forks down, two steaming entrees were headed in our direction. We immediately noticed the attention to detail in presentation — clean, hot plates garnished with a sprig of fresh dill and lemon wedge. The service was friendly and personal.

Rich, but not pricey

Mine, Scallops "Le Coq D'Or," sauteed in a tangy lemon and Chablis sauce and nestled in a light puff pastry, was enough to make even the most critical seafood connoisseur shiver with delight.

Likewise, the Chicken Cordon Bleu was more than my companion could finish. Breast of chicken stuffed with Gruyere cheese and Black Forest Ham, breaded and sauteed with a buerre blanc, gave a whole new meaning to the word rich.

Toward the end of our meal, we overhead another satisfied patron say to the proprietor, "You fill the plates too full!"

"I'd rather have the plates too full than not enough," Annelore responded generously.

Other popular entrees at Le Coq D'Or include scampi, filet of beef, broiled pork tenderloin and Kase Spaetzle, a German pasta with melted cheese and roasted onions. The sauces make the difference.

Oh, and let us not forget the Pommes Au Gratin, served piping hot in a casserole dish, one of Lorie's specialties. These were the most creamy, cheesy and delectable scalloped potatoes I've ever encountered, and yes, are included in the price of the entree.

Though we had no room for dessert, the selection was sinful. Homemade cheesecake, lemon bars with vanilla ice cream and chocolate mousse are but a few of the gastronomical delights from which to choose. Try a steaming cup of cappuccino or espresso to send you over the top.

Le Coq D'Or is open daily from 5 to 9:30 p.m. Reservations are appreciated.

With Le Coq D'Or's warm ambience, generous portions, reasonable prices and superior service, one can't leave disappointed.

— Scott Brearton

Montreux Jazz likes surprises

(Editor's note: The writer is a filmland sound technician and parttime Carmel resident. Here is the second of two parts.)

By DAVID KOEHLER

IT'S POSSIBLE to walk for miles along the Lake Geneva shoreline and not run out of gardens. If you prefer to rest, there are many stone or wooden benches nestled by the water or surrounding an old maple tree at the ferryboat landing.

These are but some of the quieter pleasures to be found by those still hearty enough to venture forth from their hotels in Montreux (Switzerland) during the annual jazz festival.

With approximately six hours of music every night, it's easy to get into a routine of concerts, eating and sleeping. The many dining choices include the overpriced hotel restaurants, the overpriced local restaurants or the overpriced festival booths.

One of our outdoor favorites this year cooked up spicy Thai food for the fairly reasonable price of 12 Swiss francs a plate — or about $8.50. Festival sponsor Heineken was always working the taps, and champagne also was available.

Fats Domino provided the ballast for the rocking Wednesday night program of New Orleans Sounds. I've never seen anyone perform who had so many hits or who strung them together in such an exciting way.

He would shift in and out of high gear at will, finishing one song to energetic roars and launching into the next one at the crest of the applause: Walkin' to New Orleans and Ain't That a Shame and Hello, Josephine.

His high-voltage renditions of these had the young, SRO crowd packed tightly and singing along from midnight until 1:30 in the morning.

Dance band legends

Opening the show this night was the traditional group of Dr. Michael White and Band. They specialize in the early 1920s and '30s style of King Oliver and the other dance band legends of Louisiana. They succeeded in recreating the two-step, stride and march styles still heard today in the French Quarter.

Rounding out the evening was an appearance by Dr. John, the night tripper who'll be at Monterey Jazz Festival next month. He stirred up his patented potion of Swamp Boogie and cast his Bayou spell. From the moment he appeared onstage doing his Cool Daddy strut, you knew you were in for a good time.

Blues Night was next and provided an energizing time. For patrons of Monterey Bay Blues Festival, the line-up may sound familiar: B.B. King and Etta James. The two crowd-pleasing entertainers presented their tight shows back-to-back and gave the frenzied European crowd its money's worth.

King summed himself up best with a lyric — "I'm a Bluesman, but a good man, understand?" Bass player Michael Doster provided his usual strong foundation.

Uncertain note

The evening started off on an uncertain note with American expatriate Al Copley at the solo piano. His fortissimo-only Blues pounding de-tuned the piano. An excellent time to explore the upstairs lounge.

Festival tradition dictates that Blues Night conclude with a jam, and this year provided a winner. Led onstage by Festival founder Claude Nobs, the participants included Joe Sample, Eddie Harris, Tata Vega and studio greats Paul Jackson Jr., Nathan East, Greg Phillinganes and George Duke — all backed by B.B. and the band.

One way for a festival to stay fresh is to take risks. Montreux is well-known for its you're-never-sure-what-happens-next format — Surprise Night.

Al DiMeola opened the show with his pyrotechnic guitar work. Next up was a multi-faceted presentation from the Seychelles Islands (in the Indian Ocean halfway between the eastern coast of Africa and India). The troupe performed colorful dances, a beachwear fashion show (!) and lots of music in an interesting blend of what sounded like Calypso-Reggae-Soca. A swinging tropical groove.

The headliner this evening was none other than film star Eddie Murphy, making his live debut with his band Psychedelic Psoul. The program of mostly original material was well-meaning and concluded with a couple of Sly Stone party tunes. Eddie ended the show by shaking hands and signing autographs from the stage.

The second to last night dipped back into the jazz bag. The Modern Jazz Quartet, saxist Nino Tempo, Eddie Harris, the Atlantic All-Stars (introduced by label chief Ahmet Ertegun), German bebop tenor player Klaus Doldinger and the poetic Joe Sample all held forth.

The main stage at Montreux seems to challenge the players to reach for and achieve great performances.

Art roundup

Russian painters will demonstrate and discuss

By JOHN DETRO

AS PART of the weekly Carmel Art Walk, a group of Russian painters will discuss their work on Friday evening, Aug. 27.

Every Friday night through September, more than 40 local galleries and studios will welcome visitors between 6 and 9 p.m.

The special program for Aug. 27 will happen at Ludwa Art Studios on San Carlos between Fifth and Sixth (Jack London Mall).

The seven Russian artists from the Hermitage group of St. Petersburg will talk about their output and demonstrate oil painting techniques. Ongoing throughout the period cited above.

They have visited Carmel previously, sharing feelings and views of the Carmel scene via your Pine Cone.

Also as part of the Carmel Art Walk, local sculptor Richard MacDonald will be at the Sybill/Dawson Gallery on Friday evening, Aug. 27. He will repeat his popular demonstration of the lost wax method to cast bronze.

CARMEL ART Association (CAA) will open a new exhibit on Thursday, Sept. 2, it was announced this week.

The show will present recent paintings by Gerald Wasserman — "intimate scenes in the coffee bars of Italy, inviting luncheons set before Mediterranean landscapes" — and small bronze sculptures from his hand. Overall title: A Table of Contents II.

Wasserman graduated from Art Institute of Chicago, has lived and exhibited in Europe and this country, enjoys long membership in CAA.

His new exhibit there will remain up through Oct. 6.

The gallery (on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth) is open to the public daily from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. For more details, call Gail Donovan at 624-6176.

AND THIS word: The Fourth Annual Monterey Bay Artists' Day will be held on Saturday, Sept. 11, in the Creative Arts Complex at Monterey Peninsula College.

For reservations to the event, interested parties were encouraged to call Monterey County Cultural Council (MCCC) right away — 424-3043.

MCCC is part of a sponsoring consortium which includes groups from Artists Equity and Cherry Center to Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, the area Quilters Club, Monterey Peninsula Art Foundation, the Network for Wearable Art, several others.

The 1993 theme: Trespass! Crossover from the Crafts Tradition. Art critic Matthew Kangas will be the featured speaker.

Highlighting the afternoon session will be a panel discussion by noted arts/crafts crossover artists James Bassler, Gaza Bowen and Susan Kingsley.

LEDBETTER GALLERY of Carmel (Morgan Court on Lincoln between Ocean and Seventh) will hold a reception from 2 to 7 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 28, to note the start of its fourth year.

Refreshments will be served during those hours, Emy and Ted Ledbetter say.

Visitors will be able to peruse her new Pearls of Light paintings.

NEW YORK City artist Darrell Fusaro says friends in Pebble Beach enticed him to "leave the heat and the concrete jungle."

Result: 28 of Fusaro's bold and colorful paintings will be shown from 11 a.m. until 7 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 29, at the Terrace Room of Carmel's Pine Inn.

The range includes "traditional stiff lifes all the way to abstracts," Fusaro adds. "When I create, the use of color opens up a world full of energy and light."

He has exhibited in several East Coast galleries and at the Society of Illustrators in Manhattan. His work was featured in a traveling show organized by the American Institute of Graphic Artists.

Fusaro's honors include scholarships from the Art Directors Club of New Jersey and the Pastel Society of America.

CARMEL FOUNDATION'S Artist of the Month for September will be Dr. Raymond Kelly, according to spokesperson Ellen Castle.

His color photographs will be shown in the Hallway Gallery from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and 1 to 4 p.m. weekends.

The reception is scheduled Sunday, Sept. 12.

SEASIDE ART Commission will present a symposium on the psychology of art starting at 7 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 26, in the council chambers of Seaside City Hall.

Spokesperson Colleen Lingenfelter says Dr. Leonard Rosen will examine "the relationships and meanings of symbols in art and other media," leaving "a generous amount of time for discussion."

Book Bag: History buffs will enjoy new Knopf titles

By DON DeNEVI

TWO NEW scholarly analyses have recently been published by Alfred A. Knopf Company which are certain to excite history buffs. Long acknowledged by serious readers as America's premier publisher, the company has always prided itself on the scholarly, the readable, and the worthwhile.

New York, New York — How the Apartment House Transformed the Life of the City (1869-1930) and Heisenberg's War — The Secret Life of the German Bomb are among the best of Knopf's long line of publications that have made a difference .

The first to arrive, New York, New York by Elizabeth Hawes is a brilliant exercise in "urban archaeology." Formerly a staff member at the New Yorker, Hawes knows her subject so well she is able to offer a completely original interpretative account of the Golden Age of the New York luxury apartment house and how it changed the city from a provincial place to a great metropolis, architecturally, socially, economically and psychologically.

Not boring

Sound boring? Think again. Consider this: with the help of 65 photographs, drawings and floor plans of New York and its apartment structures, Hawes leads us through a city of private-house dwellers, past the Civil War years, through the Roaring Twenties and Art Deco Thirties, always maintaining our focus on spaces and environments for living.

By 1935, over 98 percent of New York's population had become apartment dwellers. In brief, we are privy to a tour of how Victorian New York became modern New York, how the plush decors of rich 19th century New Yorkers evolved into what the author calls "the cool, the white, the cubist style, the modern style."

Unlike most discussions of social and architectural movements, New York, New York is not only the product of extensive research and a broad sympathetic appreciation of the social forces in a city's history, but also a heartening and courageous treatment of a much neglected subject. Through her eyes, we see how such memorable apartment buildings as the Stuyvesant, the Villard Houses, the Dakota, the Navarro and the Apthorp sprang up in all their Queen Anne, neo-Gothic and High and Low Renaissance glory out of the rubble of recently demolished brownstones, how the apartment which began as an awkward imitation private house emerged as a genre of its own, how the changes wrought in New York social life reverberated in the work of such people as Henry James, Edith Wharton and William Dean Howells.

And because Elizabeth Hawes has studied the architects, builders and financiers who were responsible for the apartment house, she writes about them with care and affection. The book, which retails for $30, is both brilliant and fascinating.

One can't help but admire her high degree of sophistication, analytical skill and comprehensiveness to take on such a complicated subject. Because she is so thorough in her accomplishment, we luck out in that we are admitted to both the brownstones and the "cloud palaces" — the opulent pioneers that paved the way for a new kind of city.

Second one

Knopf's second major summertime announcement deserves an equal amount of praise. The Thomas Powers book is also an incredible piece of writing, combining cloak-and-dagger intrigue with serious scientific and historical investigation.

Pulitzer Prize winner Powers explores what many military buffs consider the most important and perhaps controversial question of World War II: Why didn't Hitler's scientists create an atomic bomb?

After all, Germany was the birthplace of modern physics. Yet, by 1945, with The Third Reich crumbling all around, the Nazi nuclear research program was just about where it started a decade before.

What happened? Hundreds of writers and researchers have attempted to answer the question during the past 50 years. Until now, the conventional view has been that German scientists doubted the bomb could be built and were unwilling to try.

But Powers offers a radically new and thoroughly convincing explanation. And, in doing so, he not only explores for the first time the entire milieu of the period, but also details the complex interplay between science and espionage, morality and military necessity, neurotic paranoia and healthy logic, that make up the history of the German atomic bomb.

Personalities

Powers revolves his 600-page history not only around the events, but also the significant personalities: Niels Bohr, Robert Oppenheimer, so on, and most important of all, the distinguished, highly respected Werner Heisenberg (the American OSS plotted to kill him).

Secret messages, dangerous missions and plots, panic and anxiety by the Allies as Hitler gets close to the necessary breakthrough for the bomb's development, make up this exciting story.

So skillfully told, the history leaves us breathless as we wind down. Will civilization continue on its course or perish due to the dementia of one man?

THE COMMUNITY Information Program of the Monterey County Free Libraries has published the 1993 edition of the Director of Community and Human Services for Monterey County.

The Directory provides up-to-date information on more than 300 programs and agencies serving Monterey County residents.

Listed are public and private not-for-profit organizations providing health care, social services, and emergency services; and government human services agencies and programs.

Included with the description of each listed agency is its days and hours of operation and eligibility requirements.

According to County Librarian Dallas Shaffer, "The Directory provides up-to-date information in a handy format to help Monterey County residents find the services they need."

The printed Directory can be purchased in a spiral-bound handbook for $10 per copy, which covers production costs. A software version for personal computers is also available.

Dorene Greiner, information and referral coordinator for the Alliance on Aging, says of the Directory:

"Anyone who works with humans and human needs should have this guide to community resources for Monterey County."

Jazz Tides

By John Detro

The visual art part

VISUAL ARTISTS who love jazz now have major opportunities to express those passions. The openings come from Monterey Jazz Festival (MJF) and Seaside Art Commission. One situation at a time—

• Official MJF spokesperson Paul Fingerote says all interested parties are invited to submit paintings, drawings and photographs for a show called MJF Images. This will occupy a fairgrounds building throughout this year's fest — Sept. 17-18-19.

The images must, of course, center on Monterey Jazz Festival. They can be any size up to 16 by 10 inches, and must be mounted. No jury. No prizes. Simply the kick of being represented.

In the exhibit will be jazz portrait painter Bruni Sablan (depictions of Dizzy Gillespie) and bassist/photographer Milt Hinton. Milt will play the 1993 fest edition with historic New Orleans musician Danny Barker.

Items should be taken right to the Monterey Jazz Festival office at the fairgrounds. The deadline for mailed works was set at Aug. 31 — so there's no time to waste. Submissions will be held for pickup after the fest is history.

• Seaside Arts Commission makes known its annual Visual Arts' Salute to Jazz throughout September at the City Hall Gallery. "All art will be screened on the basis of suitability, adherence to the jazz theme and space available," says cultural program spokesperson Colleen Lingenfelter.

Pieces will be accepted for screening from 5 to 7 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 1, at Seaside City Hall. No fee charged. If accepted, works also will be displayed during the 10th Annual Jazz/Art Show in Oldemeyer Center on Saturday night, Sept. 11.

The show-opening public reception will be held on Friday night, Sept. 3, with live jazz and tasty refreshments included. Information: 899-6270.

Don's visit

If you care about jazz piano — as player or dedicated fan — Saturday, Aug. 28, will be a special time indeed. That's when the brilliant jazz pianist Don Haas will present two clinics "for all ages and encompassing all styles" at the Pacific Grove arts education studio of Leslie Williams (1219 Forest).

From San Francisco, Don has worked with everyone from Sinatra to Ray Charles, Benny Goodman, Bud Shank, Conte Candoli, Blue Mitchell, Shorty Rogers, on and on. He agreed to the clinics out of friendship with Nick Williams, Leslie's spouse and longtime local jazz pro.

The first clinic will run from 10 a.m. until noon and cover composition, arranging and performance. And from 1 until 3 p.m. will be strictly a performance period.

Costs are $25 per clinic or $45 for both, Call 647-1494 or 626-9151.

Brazilian sounds

Meanwhile, Nick Williams, Rio pianist Osmar Milito and sidemen will offer Brazilian jazz starting at 8 p.m. Friday, Aug. 27, in Pacific Grove's Portofino Coffee House.

It's $10 per at the door. Reservations: 373-7370. Osmar's the brother of Helcio Milito, masterful percussionist who has lived in this area for some time.

Other Portofino offerings: Acoustic jazz stylings from Jack and Jenny (Aug. 26), fundraiser for the house with vocalist Mary Ann Randl and others (Aug. 28), jazz jam fundraiser from 4 p.m. on (Aug. 29), Mary Ann Randl and Martan Mann in concert (Aug. 30). Portofino's getting ready to move into bigger quarters and expand its lively arts programming.

Brilliant jazz pianist Don Haas plans local clinics.

Jazz Tides: Deejay Don at work

Short takes

• Very fine jazz broadcaster Don Balestrieri does the early morning weekday show (6 to 9) at KRML Radio (1410AM). On Friday, Aug. 27, he will devote the second and third hours to women in jazz. "I mean other than vocalists," Don says — "the instrumentalists and the composers. This could become a weekly slot."

• Kuumbwa Jazz Center of Santa Cruz will present an evening of solo piano with Marcus Roberts at 8 p.m. Monday, Aug. 30. Either $13 advance or $15 at the door. Ticketmaster.

The annual Kuumbwa Birthday Party will be in San Lorenzo Park on Sunday, Sept. 5. This always has good acts. And it's a freebie.

At the same venue at 8 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 26 — superb Brazilian vocalist Claudia Villela with percussionist and composer Junior Homrich, Ricardo Peixoto (guitars) and Carlos Oliveira (guitar and zabumba). Admission: $10.

• Don't forget that top line trombonist Steve Turre will front a group at Monterey Bay Aquarium on Saturday night, Sept. 11. Tickets may be bought in advance via 648-4880. Proceeds will benefit education programs of the non-profit aquarium and Kuumbwa.

(Steve's conch shell ensemble also will play that evening.)

• Z and Z Entertainment of San Jose announces a show called Massive Culture '93 at the West Coast Market Place from 2 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 4, until 6 a.m. the next morning. Featured along with jazz bands will be hip hop, alternative rock, reggae, dance music. Ticketmaster.

• If you feel like traveling a bit, the jazz series at Woodside's Filoli Mansion and Gardens continues on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 29. Appearing will be Mel Martin's Bebop and Beyond. Info: (415) 285-3820.

Cultural Council announces latest cycle of grants for art

MONTEREY COUNTY Cultural Council's Regranting Program guidelines and application forms now are available.

New applicants can receive guidelines by sending a self-addressed, business-size or larger envelope to: Regranting Program, MCCC, PO Box 246, Salinas 93902. Applications have been mailed to last year's recipients.

The deadline for application receipt is Sept. 22.

This is the ninth cycle of the Regranting Program, which distributes monies set aside for culture by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

All non-profit, tax-exempt organizations located in Monterey County and providing literary, visual, media, or performing arts programming are eligible after one year of operation. Programming must be directed to Monterey County audiences, and priority will be given to organizations that provide programs for "underserved residents" — the geographically isolated, minorities, senior citizens, youth and the incarcerated. Multi-cultural content of programs in encouraged.

Emerging units

Two categories of grants are available: Arts Institutions/Organizations Grants and Arts Programs/Multi-cultural Arts Programs Grants. Arts Programs/Multi-cultural Arts Programs Grants are intended to support the programs of emerging arts groups — and also to support the arts programs of community organizations.

Additionally, Multi-cultural Arts Programs Grants will be awarded for programs rooted in the ethnic expressions of Native American, Hispanic, Pacific Islander and African cultures.

In some cases, arts groups who do not possess non-profit standing may apply through a sponsoring non-profit organization.

Arts Institutions/Organizations Grants are intended to support the general program of established arts resources.

Demonstration needed

In both categories, applicants must demonstrate equivalent support from other sources. Application cannot be made in both funding categories by the same organization in the same year.

The Monterey County Cultural Council will hold workshops to assist applicants with the preparation of proposals. The staff also will be available by telephone or by appointment.

Grant applications are judged by a rotating panel of community members who represent broad experience in all artistic disciplines. The Grants Review Panel assembles yearly to evaluate proposals using the following criteria:

Artistic excellence, quality and community service of the institution applying; administrative and artistic qualifications of personnel; outreach to underserved audiences; multicultural content of programs; evidence of community support; budget information; and organization's financial stability.

For further information, call 1-424-3043.

European film classics latest to hit video scene

N.Y.-based company is selling rare foreign films at affordable prices

By DON DENEVI

FOR THOSE who yearn to watch foreign film classics in the privacy of their living rooms, the wait is over.

Thanks to Interama, Inc., of New York, a wide selection of feature length films from France, Spain, Germany, and Italy — with or without subtitles — are now available at inexpensive prices.

The collection is known as the "Boutique of International Classics On Video," and Interama offers only features in their original, uncut versions. And, of course, most viewers appreciate watching them as they were intended to be seen by the filmmakers.

Imagine having the entire Fanny Trilogy in the comfort of one's home. Based upon the works of novelist-director Marcel Pagnol, the three French films from the 1930s — Marius, Fanny and Cesar — star Raimu, Pierre Charpin, Orane Demazis and Pierre Fresnay. Pagnol's slice-of-life comedy and love story about the townspeople of Marseilles come to life in restored black and white images and enhanced sound.

For less than $90 — that's under $30 apiece — we relive the 400 minutes that made French cinemagoers cry with pride and joy — stories that have just as much relevance today as they did then.

Few people know that Berkeley's famed Che Panisse Restaurant (where, incidentally, President Clinton dined recently) is named after the warm-hearted Panisse, the character portrayed by the incomparable Charpin.

List goes on

Other classics available include Herdsmen of the Sun (Werner Herzog), Prix de Beaute (with Louise Brooks, 1930, 93 minutes), Le Doulos (with Jean-Paul Belmondo, 1962, 108 minutes), Jean-Luc Goddard's Pierrot Le Fou and A Woman is a Woman.

Then there is Claude Chabrol's The Horse of Pride, Carlos Saura's Mama Turns 100 and Crial, Jean Renoir's French Can Can and The Crime of Monsieur Lange, and some 70 others.

These great films can be purchased directly from Interama, Inc., 301 West 53rd St., Suite 19E, New York, N.Y. 10019 (212) 977-4830, or one can persuade his or her video rental store to carry the foreign film classics.

The foreign film fan is liable to become as hooked on these classics as this reviewer. Few American directors have ever achieved the love and warmth that these great directors manage to reveal in each of these classics.

THE EXPRESSIVE Rafaela Aparicio appears in Spain's Mama Turns 100, a film by Carlos Saura.

Those Hoboken nuns step lively in GroveMont show

By JAMES P. KINNEY

STEPHI WALDRIP

AGAIN WITH the little nuns from New Jersey!

Over a year ago, in late July, 1992, a musical comedy by Dan Goggins—Nunsense — opened at GroveMont's downtown Monterey Playhouse. It turned out to be GroveMont's most successful show ever, running for 14 weeks to sold-out audiences.

Now GroveMont is back with Nunsense II: the second coming, with the same five nuns from Mt. Saint Helens School in Hoboken singing and dancing their way into our hearts. Three of the original actresses have changed; two are reprising. The show is slated to run through Oct. 31 and will be GroveMont's last at their present location.

In Nunsense II, the Hoboken nuns — now known as The Little Hobos — throw a thank-you party six months after for those who helped them raise money to bury dead nuns stashed in their walk-in freezer. They dance and sing and joke around and even float a few new ideas, like asking what a lot of Catholics have been wondering about for a while, "Why can't women be priests?"

Papal pass

The pope undoubtedly would pass on that one. Inevitably, the nuns draw us into one more bingo game and snap their "crickets" whenever they need silence. But complications arise.

A group of brown-robed Franciscans, led by a menacing, hulking Sister Brunhilde, are planning a hostile take-over of their convent home. What to do? Pray more, sing more, dance more. Of course.

What is it about nuns that so fascinates people? We have movies about them, plays about them, lots of jokes about them. Is it because there is something still mysterious about nuns' lives, how they relate to the world, their dedication?

Things, of course, have changed with them as they have with us over the past 30 years. Vatican II was, indeed, a watershed.

Unlike in the play, most nuns don't wear the traditional habits any more, with just hands and face showing. Many have chosen to be in the thick of things, dealing with drug addicts, the down-and-outs, the homeless, the lost. Yet, no matter how tough and resilient, nuns for many still retain that mystique, that special kind of innocence, "in the world, but not of it."

More of the same

For those who liked Nunsense I, expect more of the same. Under new director Robin McKee, the pacing remains lively, the spirit entirely exuberant. But there are differences.

The humor is more risque, the jokes quite a bit earthier. I don't know if that's good or bad. But lines like, "Does the pope poop in the woods?" seem gratuitous, even tasteless.

Is it maybe that sequels, by their nature, feel compulsed to "up the ante?" Like, "Hey, you think that was good? Catch this one."

Rosanna Yadegari as Sister Regina, one of the returnees, is as spirited and light on her feet as in the original. Her Look Ma, I Made It is gutsy ragtime, well sung and sharply delivered. Yadegari has a lock grip on this character.

Amy Washburn as Sister Robert Anne (the other returnee) is peppy, droll and lively all the time, but especially in her Un Bel Di and I Am Here to Stay.

Fresh twang

Kimberly J. Pryor as Sister Amnesia brings a decidedly country manner and fresh twang to her Country Nun and No One Cared Like You. She is down home and refreshing in the part.

Stephi Waldrip brings a hearty presence and powerful voice to her Sister Hubert, hamming it up outrageously with Yadegari in The Classic Queens and What Would Elvis Do?

Tomoko Omori is cute, mischevious, thoroughly endearing as novice Sister Mary Leo, the nun who aspires to be a ballerina, in Prima Ballerina and The Padre Polka. But I lost her words on several occasions; she needs to keep the volume up.

The entire cast seemed to be having uproarious fun in the show's big stoppers — Hat and Cane Song and Yes We Can and a rousing, hand-slapping gospel rendition of There's Only One Way to End Your Prayers.

Nunsense I closed the same way. If you liked Godfather II as well as Godfather I, or were as scared by Halloween III as you were by Halloween I, this is probably for you. It doesn't hurt if you like nuns anyway.

Performance spaces facing significant changes

By JOHN DETRO

SIGNIFICANT PERFORMANCE spaces in this area today face significant changes.

Experiencing major shifts location-wise are Pacific Grove's popular Portofino Cafe and GroveMont Theater, which makes known its move away from the Monterey Playhouse.

Let's take these cases one at a time—

Portofino owner Barbara Murphy books live jazz, folk acts, poetry readings, lectures, art shows.

"For eight years we've been a magnet. Now," she says, "we're packing up our espresso gear and expanding. The new quarters will be just across 17th St. — to the ground floor of the old Grove Theater. That building is being renovated and brightened into a center for the arts."

And: "October is the official opening month. The cafe will reach all the way to the sidewalk, offering orchestra seats to view what's going on in town. Adjoining the cafe, a spacious performance area will offer music, spoken arts and a gallery for paintings and sculpture."

Murphy says all interested parties are invited to participate in the project. "Commitment sheets" are available at the present site (downstairs in Pacific Grove Plaza); it's asked that these be filled out and returned "by September."

For additional details, call Barbara at 373-7379.

Going dark

GroveMont Executive Director Stephen Moorer says the company's main stage — Monterey Playhouse at 425 Washington — will close after the curtain falls on Nunsense II on Oct. 31 (at the latest).

The word emerges while the group conducts its current capital campaign to buy a permanent performance facility.

According to Development Director Dan Gotch, "As a result of the recession we can no longer afford or justify either the rental or the option-price of $895,000."

Moorer: "This (closure) isn't terminal. The campaign will go on. We're negotiating on a few different places, and we'll let you know as soon as something definite happens."

In the meantime, Moorer adds: "We could become a festival theater for a year or two and concentrate on TheatreFest, touring and the Carmel Shakespeare Festival. This would allow us to avoid a year-round facility, utility and insurance costs until this economic climate turns."

He sees a second option — "Move back to the Arts Center (at 320 Hoffman in New Monterey), restructure, refurbish amd probably begin performances in early 1994. Quite frankly, this option depends on funding.

"For eight years our rent has been covered by income generated from classes we teach on behalf of Monterey Peninsula College. Due to the state fiscal crisis, college fees have tripled. Fee increases and a decline in the student base make us project a loss of about $40,000 in annual operating funds."

Without these funds, Moorer says, the prospect of paying year-round facility bills "is dismal at best. If we really want to keep the Arts Center, we will either need to create an endowment fund or hope an angel appears."

Playwright Christopher Durang

Under the second option, the DurangFest — originally scheduled at The Playhouse during November and December — would be relocated to the Arts Center stage with a projected opening of January 1994.

Gotch adds: "Remember that we already have secured a $100,000 matching grant from the Packard Foundation towards a building purchase, and almost $30,000 from GroveMont directors and individual donors toward that match."

Swiss jazz festival likes surprise

There was no better example of this than keyboardist Greg Phillinganes, lying low in the weeds until his final number and then screaming out, pushing his electronic instrument to the extreme.

Greg has been a member of Quincy Jones' first call studio list for years along with Paul Jackson Jr., Gerald Albright and George Duke. When I spoke with Quincy, he assured me that he was coming back next year — so there should be more of the same great personnel.

The Grand Gala Night Finale is always a smash, going into the next morning and wringing the last bit of joyful endurance from the fans.

The Japanese band Hiroshima, based in Los Angeles, blended authentic instruments (electric koto!), drums and vocals with electric rock. Interesting and powerful, if at times long-winded.

The next offering was surprise jazz newcomer Joshua Redman on tenor. Playing a sophisticated song list of Ornette Coleman, Miles and Ellington, he provided a last glimpse of straight-ahead jazz for the summer.

Joined by Pat Metheny on guitar and Eddie Harris on mouth-bass, a la Bobby McFerrin, Redman played a well-received set. Of particular note was outstanding young acoustic bassist Christian McBride. His playing is confident and muscular with echoes of many of the greats to be heard in his solos.

Star Time

And then it was Star Time. There was no better way to end this 16-day extravaganza than with the Godfather of Soul — James Brown.

Wearing a deep orange tuxedo of his own design, James was outrageous. He cranked through all of his classics over the next hour and a half.

Capes, costume changes, rap dancers added. James left the audience both exhausted and begging for more. It was impossible to tell who was more worked out by show's end — the 27 people onstage of the 3,500 chair-standing, screaming audience members.

As we filed out of Stravinsky Auditorium for the last time this summer, the lakeshore was calm at 2 a.m. The swans slept with their long necks tucked across their backs. The water lapped against the rocks.

The party was over. And a fine party it had been.
